OTT CLOUTS 2 HOMERS

By JOE CASHMAN

Polo Grounds, New York, N. Y., April 24 — The Giants made it two straight over the Boston Bees here this afternoon as two home runs by Mel Ott and one by Dick Bartell featured in the New Yorkers assault on John "Terbacker" Lanning, Bees' starting hurler.

On the hill for Bill Terry's National League champions was Clyde Castleman, young right-hander, who was no great shakes as a pitcher last season, judging from his record of four wins and seven defeats.

The Bees, scoring but one run in their three starts to date, finally seemed to stand a chance of improving a few markers.

For a change, finest baseball weather prevailed for the tilt. A bright, warm sun beamed down on the field from a cloudless sky. The crowd numbered about 7500.

THREAT TO SHUT CIO FOOD STORE IN MAINE

By ALAN C. FRAZER

Auburn, Me., April 24—CIO leaders conducting the alleged illegal strike of shoe workers in this city and Lewiston ran into more trouble today when Supreme Court Justice Harry Manser threatened to close the commissary where strikers and their families are being fed.

Judge Manser in open court indicated he would close the food station on Monday if mass meetings, at which he said disturbances are fomented, continue over the week-end.

National Guardsmen and state police still are patrolling the streets here to prevent further attempts of strikers to pour in mass formation over the bridges from Lewiston.

JURY TRIAL FOR SIX

Judge Manser also stripped a CIO attorney from Boston of the full privileges granted him as a matter of courtesy in the Maine courts, and he agreed to a jury trial for the lawyer and five CIO strikers who have been cited for contempt. The trial starts Tuesday.

Judge Manser explained that the strikers' food station was really barred by his decree of last Tues-

Wightman Leaves Estate to Family

With exception of one bequest, the estate of the late George H. Wightman of Brookline, foremost exponent of amateur tennis, was left entirely to his widow, two children and four grandchildren, according to his will filed in Dedham Probate Court today.

Wightman, who at one time was associated with the Carnegie steel organization, died April 20 at his Brookline home. He was 81.

Edward S. Grant, an employe in the household for 30 years, was left $3000.

The residue of the estate was left to his widow, Mrs. Flora Arnold Wightman, with the provision that on her death or remarriage it is to be divided between a son, George W. Wightman, Boston attorney, a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pope, and four grandchildren, Philip K. Reynolds, Elizabeth J. Reynolds, Elizabeth W. Palmer and Dudley B. Palmer, Jr.

The two Reynolds grandchildren are son and daughter of the late Mrs. Flora W. Reynolds, a daughter, who died in 1922. The other two grandchildren are of the late Mrs. Clara W. Palmer another daughter who died six years ago.

George Wightman was named executor. No bond was filed to show the value of the estate.

It's Bunk, But Here's Cure

Indianapolis, April 24 (AP)—The Indiana State Medical Association prescribed today for "that mythical ailment known as Spring fever."

"Rest, sleep, fresh air, a certain amount of recreation, exercise, freedom from worry and a check-up by your family doctor," said a bulletin of the association, "will do more good than all of the old-fashioned, nasty-tasting concoctions containing sulphur and molasses that grandmother used to force down us, or any of those new-fangled highly publicized remedies."

Navy Plebes Sink Lion Oarsmen

Annapolis, Md., April 24 (INS)—On rough water and against a headwind, the Navy plebes defeated the columbia freshmen oarsmen by three lengths and a half over a course of a mile and a half here today.

The Navy lads took the water first and speedily jumped to a lead of two lengths. They took things rather easily during the rest of the race, adding to the margin at all stages and finishing in fine shape.

Tornado, Lightning Kill Two In South

Benton, Ark., April 24 (AP)—Tornadic winds, lightning and hail left two dead, more than a score injured and thousands of dollars property damage today in widely separated sections of the south.

New Madrid, Mo., April 24 (AP)—Five persons were injured, three seriously, and several farm homes near here were wrecked by a tornado early today.

20,000 Crowd Sees Sox Tilt

GROVE BELTED FOR 3 RUNS

By BILL GRIMES

Fenway Park, Boston, April 24—Although the sun shone brightly from a cloudless sky, there was a cold, biting northeast wind sweeping into Fenway Park, when the Red Sox and Yankees went into action for the opening game of the local American League season this afternoon.

Lefty Grove and Monty Pearson were the starting pitchers. Grove was given a great reception by the fans as he started warming up.

Despite the frigid winds, 20,000 sat in the newly-painted stands.

Just before game time, led by Jimmy Coughlin's band, a squad of United States Marines marched to the flagpole in center field, and while the flag raising ceremonies were going on, the Red Sox lined up along the first base line and the Yankees between home plate and third base.

Governor Hurley started the American League home season by tossing out the first ball.

After four scoreless innings the Yankees pushed over two runs in the fifth.

A single by Hoag, a sacrifice and a walk to Crosetti put two on. After Rolfe had forced Crosetti, Powell and Gehrig singled in succession to score Hoag and Rolfe.

The Yanks got another in the sixth. Lazzeri opened with a double. Selkirk sacrificed and Tony scored when Hoag beat out a slow roller.

The Sox tied it up in their half of the inning.

Dellesandro batted for Grove and walked, Doen and Cramer singled, Dellesandro scoring. Gaffke moved the runners up with a sacrifice and Cronin doubled scoring Doen and Cramer to tie up the ball game.

Father in Bus Race To Aid Infant Son In Transfusion

The life of three-day-old James Ierardi, Jr., was saved today when state police speeded the baby's father from Wrentham to Boston-Lying-In hospital to give the infant a blood transfusion.

Ierardi, Sr., a bus driver, was on duty on a route that passed through Wrentham.

He was intercepted there by state police at request of his sister, Mrs. Mary Shine of Washington street, Dorchester.

Still driving his bus, he sped to Boston and reported at the hospital.

After the transfusion, which was performed at once, the child was reported in improved condition.

The mother, Mrs. Margaret Devaney Ierardi, 25, was still in critical condition.

MAINE COURT THREATENS TO SHUT STRIKE FOOD SHOP

CIO LEADERS FROM BOSTON IN NEW TILT

day—an injunction forbidding all aid and encouragement to the "illegal strike"—but he said it had been expressly permitted to remain open "on tolerance."

Judge Manser said:

"The terms of my order were discussed by counsel for both sides as to its scope and intent.

"I said in my decree that each and every one of the defendants, their agents, servants and representatives, were enjoined from maintaining, encouraging, aiding and abetting the strike, or aiding employes of the various concerns, to continue the strike.

CITES PEOPLE'S NEED

"Attention was directed to the question as to whether or not it would be giving aid to employes of the plaintiffs participating in the strike to furnish them with food by means of a commissary.

"The court was of the opinion that very likely a good many of those participating in the strike were in actual want; that they even might not be able to get work at their old places if they so desired because material was not ready for them.

"And it was also our opinion that, assuming the purpose and intent of the parties to abide by the provisions of my decree, a reasonable time should be given so that the knowledge of my decree might be brought home to all the employes; and for that length of time needy cases might be assisted.

"Without regard at all to the question of legal proof as to whether there have been violations of my order, it now does appear that there has been sufficient time for all people to have received word and had the opportunity to adjust themselves to the circumstances.

MUST MAINTAIN ORDER

"It appears that the petitions of the plaintiffs are justified urging on the court that the right to maintain the commissary should be terminated. Heretofore it was allowed to continue open on tolerance.

"But the court will await what takes place over the week-end before deciding that question.

"It is apparent that a very disturbed state exists in these two cities.

"It is common knowledge that police authorities had to augment their departments, that the state police had to come in, that the militia has been sent, all because of the necessity for maintaining order and preserving peace.

"And it is apparent, whether there has been any violation of the injunction or not, that mass meetings have further incited the people to unrest and disturbance.

CHALLENGES COURT'S POWER

"Whether these mass meetings continue, notwithstanding the clear and apparent influence upon the susceptibilities and psychology of the populace, will have much to do with whether this court decides that the strict terms of the injunction must be carried out with regard to the commissary."

The question of forcing discontinuance of the commissary was brought up at the court session by John J. Mahon, attorney and spokesman for the shoe manufacturers.

Attorney Sidney Grant of Boston, who later was stripped of his privileges in the Maine courts by Judge Manser, challenged the court's jurisdiction in the present situation, asserting it was a federal matter.

Judge Manser reserved decision on this point but indicated how he stood when he ordered the calling of jurors Tuesday for trial of Attorney Grant and the five CIO organizers, charged with contempt.

The Boston lawyer also challenged the proceedings on two technical grounds. He contended the defendants now charged with violating theinjuction had never been properly served with notice of the decree.

SAYS SERVICE REQUIRED

He also argued they have not been notified of the exact manner in which it is alleged they violated the injunction and committed contempt of court.

Judge Manser replied to Attorney Grant that it was his understanding that the lawyer had agreed that serving of notice of the injunction on all the defendants was not necessary, as long as the attorney was present in court and knew of its issuance.

Attorney Grant replied that he had simply agreed that if the Maine law did not require it, he was satisfied, but he now asserted the law did require service and he said he had never waived the provisions of the law.

Judge Manser then stripped him of his privilege to appear in the Maine courts as if he were a member of the Maine Bar. However he recognized Attorney Grant's right to represent himself as a defendant and to represent the other defendants under a power of attorney.

UNDER LAW OF 1903

The six defendants were released today in $2000 bail each. Besides Grant they are William J. Mackey, John D. Nolan, Paul Salvaggio, Ernest Henry and Martin J. Lawless, all from Massachusetts.

Trial by jury in contempt cases, where the alleged contempt was not committed in court, is permitted under a law enacted in this state in 1933.

Arriving in Lewiston today, on the side of the strikers, was Mrs. Mary Donovan Hapgood, prominent in the Massachusetts Sacco-Vanzetti agitation 10 years ago.

Vainly battling Maine state troopers is this young wife, who claimed that she was not a striker and because she was on her way home demurred when a trooper ordered her back out of the restricted area in Auburn. She claimed that she was an expectant mother. Chief of Police Harry Rowe told reporters that she had spit in the face of one of the troopers.

2 WOMEN, MAN HURT IN CRASH

Three persons were injured when an automobile struck a traffic island at Massachusetts avenue and Lake street, Arlington, early today.

George H. Parsons, 38, of Detroit, Billerica, whom police said was driving the car, was taken to Symmes Hospital with face cuts and a wrenched back.

Miss Dorothy Stuart, 21, of Autumn street, Billerica, and her mother, Mrs. Agnes Stuart, 45, were released after treatment for cuts about the head, arms and legs.

Police arrested Everett Stuart, 52, father of the injured girl, and Irving W. Melendy, 22, of Baker street, Billerica, on charges of drunkenness. Neither was injured.

7 Men Fined $400 On Gaming Counts

Eight men and one blonde girl, arrested on gaming charges in raids in Cambridge and Roxbury, were arraigned in court today.

Fines totalling $400 were assessed seven men in East Cambridge District Court. They were arrested in a room behind a studio on Massachusetts avenue, near Harvard yard.

Samuel Cohen, 30, of Glendale road, Everett, and Benjamin Creedman, 49, of Madison street, Cambridge, a photographer, were fined $100 each, for setting up and promoting a lottery.

Cohen was charged an additional fine of $50, Creedman another $25 fine, and five others were assessed $25 each.

Abraham Brickman, 24, of Cunningham street, Roxbury, and Gertrude Franklin, 20, of Woodrow avenue, Mattapan, taken at a Roxbury apartment, were charged with registering bets and setting up a lottery.

They were released on their own recognizance, for trial April 30.

Blum Quitting "Absurd"

Paris, April 24 (INS)—A rumor Premier Leon Blum plans to resign was branded as "absurd" by government spokesmen today.

U.S. Mediators Delay Crisis in Rail Strike

New York, April 24 (INS)—Through the efforts of the Federal Mediation Board a railway union strike call that would have affected eleven big railroad lines and isolated the city by choking off freight service and crippling passenger movements, was postponed today for 48 hours.

A bargaining conference to reconsider the union's demands was arranged by the board and set for 8 o'clock tonight.

George O. Price, of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employes, will represent the union and John G. Walber, vice president in charge of personnel for New York Central, will head the railroads' delegation.

Price set a new deadline for Monday noon. He said:

"We have received assurances that a satisfactory settlement of the controversy with the railroads may be reached if we can hold our men on the job for another 48 hours. We are exerting all our efforts to prevent a walkout."

The chief railroads affected by the strike threat were the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the Long Island, the New Haven, the Erie, the Lackawanna, the Lehigh Valley and the Baltimore and Ohio.

From them the union sought an agreement for a general wage increase of 20 cents an hour, vacations with pay, a full day's pay for any fractional working day and recognition as the sole bargaining agency.

Ford Sitters Quit; Cannery War Ends

By the Associated Press

Evacuation of a Ford Motor Company plant by sit-down strikers and a peace parley in a riotous cannery strike eased tension in two major California labor disputes today.

The 600 sit-downers at the Ford assembly plant in Richmond, Cal., made their exodus early today, 11 hours after taking possession as a protest against alleged discrimination in the departmental transfer of 12 unionists.

Officials of the United Automobile Workers Union who urged the strikers to evacuate said the dispute would be settled in a day or two. Ford officials in Detroit had no immediate comment. Yesterday a representative of the American Federation of Labor said the Federation had a right recognition as a bargaining agency for Ford employes.

A tentative agreement on wage increases and union recognition was in prospect in the bloody cannery strike at Stockton, Cal. Representatives of opposing forces who met with Governor Frank F. Merriam jointly stated they were "not far from a satisfactory solution."

The conference followed a clash between pickets and sheriff's deputies and state officers in which half a hundred persons were injured, two of them seriously. Teargas, shotgun fire, clubs, rocks and other missiles were brought into play when pickets rushed a truck delivering spinach to the strike-bound plant.

Four persons were injured in demonstrations against a food store chain at Cincinnati, scene of a meat cutters strike.

Settlement of the strike of 3700 General Motors employes at Oshawa, Ont., left unchanged Premier Mitchell Hepburn's feelings toward the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization. He said he would retire if the people of Ontario "are prepared to accept the domination of Canadian industry by Lewis and his paid hirelings."

STRIKE PERIL TO CORONATION

London, April 24 (INS)—The shadow of a threatened transportation tie-up today was thrown across the forthcoming coronation of King George VI.

London busmen voted to strike at midnight April 30 to compel shorter working hours.

If the strike should get under way thousands in London for coronation festivities would be seriously inconvenienced.

POLL PREDICTS COURT DEFEAT

Washington, April 24—The future of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan rested today with a small bloc of non-committal senators, after the Senate judiciary committee closed seven weeks of public hearings at which opposition speakers far outnumbered advocates.

A poll of the committee, which begins secret deliberations Tuesday, showed the administration had no chance of a favorable report and faced the danger of an adverse recommendation. A second poll disclosed all attempts to modify the President's proposal to name six new justices to the high court undoubtedly would be defeated in committee.

The first poll showed nine senators opposed to the six-justice plan, seven favoring it and two still noncommitted. It showed the administration was without a friendly majority in the committee.

The second poll showed a vote of at least 10 to 8, possibly 11 to 7, against modifying the plan so as to authorize the appointment of less than six new justices. Several compromises were being prepared by committee members to reduce the number of proposed new justices. All seemed doomed to defeat in committee.

Senator Ashurst (D.), Arizona, chairman, meanwhile announced he hoped to get the bill into the Senate to start debate by May 20.

2 Suspects Seized In Wool Theft

Launching a drive against men preying on docks and warehouses in recent weeks, U. S. customs officials today arrested two men and charged them with larceny of a bale of wool.

The men gave their names as Harold W. Coughlin, 32, of Concord street, North Wilmington, and Thomas A. Dowling, 39, of Eastern avenue, Revere.

They were charged with taking the wool, valued at $210, from East Boston docks, while it was in custody of customs officials, making it a federal offense.

The men were taken to station 2, and later to the federal building to be arraigned before the U. S. commissioner.

Thomas F. Finnegan, deputy collector of customs, said this was the first arrest in a drive to clean up thievery along the waterfront, which has forced steamship lines to employ extra watchmen in recent weeks.

State Probes Job Religious Test

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley has started an investigation to learn whether religious affiliations of applicants for positions in the state department of mental diseases have any bearing on appointments, it was learned today. Investigators from the auditor's department, it was revealed, have found that application papers for positions in the 16 institutions under the department contain questions relative to religion. This is said to be in violation of the state laws.

It was further disclosed that the auditor's investigators have been unable so far to learn who is responsible for including the questions on the application blanks. It was found that although an answer to the questions on religion is not obligatory, very few applicants failed to fill the blanks in their entirety.

Who Spilled Paint?

ARCHBISHOP'S CLOAK BIG HEADACHE

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

London, April 24 (INS)—Who spilled paint on the gorgeous robe of the Archbishop of Canterbury?

Nobody knows exactly, but it's happened, and the Royal School of Needlework today is frantically trying to remove the stain.

It is presumed the contretemps occurred during the recent coronation rehearsal in Westminster Abbey, where painting was still going on . . . But it's had form to inquire about details.

MANY HEADACHES

This is but one of many minor irritations preceding the coronation. Lord Carlisle is reported to have lost the family coronet and now to be planning to attend the ceremony in a borrowed one, belonging to the grandfather of a friend.

Nerves of the titled are becoming frazzled by constant dress fittings and abbey rehearsals, with regimenting, curtseying, walking and timing.

One duchess, after a rehearsal, said:

"They're using a dummy crown, sword of state, sceptors, and standards—why doesn't somebody invent dummy duchesses? The last rehearsal was scrappy, muddled, and very tiring."

The Duchess of Gloucester, who is not so tall as the Duchess of Kent, will wear a three-inch Spanish heel, while her sister-in-law will wear low heels, to equalize their height.

NEEDN'T ATTEND

A problem that has been rattling many members of the peerage who were disinclined to attend the coronation was settled with the official interpretation that the invitation to the Abbey did not constitute a royal command, but were entirely optional.

The Princess Royal (Princess Mary), who is celebrating her 40th birthday tomorrow, is not participating officially in the Abbey ceremony, will sit in the royal box with her mother, Queen Mary.

ENCYCLOPEDIA FIRST BOOK OUT TODAY

The book you've been waiting for is out today.

'Sally' and Wife Rest Love Battle Over Week-End

Her 50 Kisses Told of In Court

PORTIA'S ROMANCE STORY

Two women in the life of Joseph F. Kelly, Arlington oil salesman, one his faithful wife, the other a 20-year-old ex-student suing him for $25,000 for breach of promise, had finished their courtroom drama today.

They were looking forward to the final outcome of their court testimony Monday, when Judge George Y. Leary will charge the jury in the breach of contract trial, and 12 "good men and true" consider whether Zaheyla "Sally" Griffin is entitled to damages as a result of her romance with Kelly.

As the trial came to an end yesterday both women sobbed openly in court, while counsel for Sally branded Kelly as a "yellow shiek hiding behind his wife's skirts" and defense counsel called the Portia Law school student a girl who willingly chased a wedded man.

Romance at 17

Sally was only 17 years old when, she testified, her brief romance with Kelly, 20, and the father of five children, began. In less than three months, she told the court, it bloomed and faded.

She charged that Kelly proposed marriage, took her on a glamorous round of night clubs, shows and entertainment, only to break her dream by the revelations he was married.

During the day Kelly testified he had kissed Sally between 20 and 40 times, but declared they were only "lukewarm" kisses and did not include a proposal of marriage. He knew he was married at their first meeting aboard the New York boat, he said.

He said he went out with the young law student, who was then in high school, because she was a "marvelous dancer" and that he was "proud to be seen with her."

Mrs. Christina Kelly, his wife, took the stand and testified she had the "utmost confidence in my husband" and didn't believe he "stepped out."

She had met Miss Griffin several times, she said, but had no intimation she was other than a family friend until Sally kept calling for her husband on the telephone, disguising her voice and giving a false name.

During the final arguments of opposing attorneys Mrs. Kelly and Sally sat a few seats apart, the wife weeping quietly. Sally's sobs could be heard throughout the courtroom.

15 FR. DIVINE 'ANGELS' FLEE FIRE IN 'HEAVEN'

New Paltz, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—Fire drove 15 of Father Divine's "angels" from a newly purchased branch "heaven" today, less than 24 hours after the Negro cult leader, who is known as "God" to his followers, was arraigned in New York city on a charge of felonious assault.

The office of Sheriff A. F. Molyneaux at Kingston announced an immediate investigation. The fire destroyed the 22-room two-story structure.

Residents of Ulster County protested the Negro's purchase of 22 parcels of land when the sales occurred, and recently attempted to preclude [illegible] tering of minor "angels" [illegible] which Father Divine call[illegible]pension heavens.

Truck in River, Driver Saves Self

A Cambridge pastry truck driver narrowly missed death today when his truck crashed through a Memorial drive railing and somersaulted into the Charles river, 18 feet below.

The driver, Charles A. Franks, 27, of Putnam avenue, Cambridge, climbed through a broken window of his cab and perched on the truck's hood, which was just above the surface of the water.

He was rescued by a milkman, who extended a Metropolitan District commission life-saving ladder to him.

Franks was taken by police to Cambridge City Hospital, where he was treated for lacerations of hands and face and for immersion.

He said the accident was caused by a passenger auto which swerved by him at a high rate of speed, forcing him off the highway, just as he was approaching the bridge.

SECOND Brookline TRIAL

OPENS MONDAY; 3 DEFENDANTS

Defense counsel and Norfolk County prosecutors prepared today for a second, so-called Brookline graft trial Monday.

After the first such trial, two police officer defendants were today awaiting sentence.

They are James J. Donovan and Thomas G. Grennon, both former patrolmen of the Brookline force. Their conviction on charges of extortion, bribery and conspiracy automatically removed them from their positions.

They will be sentenced Friday by Judge Edward F. Hanify, who found them guilty after hearing testimony for several days in Dedham court.

10-Year Maximum

Maximum penalty which may be imposed is ten years in state prison.

Frank L. Cilley, tried at the same time as were Donovan and Grennon, was found not guilty. He was charged only with a single count of alleged conspiracy.

Defendants in the second "graft" trial, set for Monday, will be Police Sergeant Henry H. McNeill of Brookline, Dr. Harry Ostrer of Brookline, and Alfred Sheinfain, now a federal penetentiary inmate.

They also will be tried before Judge Hanify in Norfolk superior criminal court in Dedham.

Sergeant McNeil must answer to eight indictments, charging him with bribery and conspiracy. Dr. Ostrer, a physician, is charged with conspiracy, as is Sheinfain.

Prosecutors said today that federal officials have promised to bring Sheinfain to Dedham from Atlanta penitentiary.

It is alleged that Sheinfain, operating a disorderly house in Brookline, purchased police protection through Sergeant McNeil. Dr. Ostrer is accused of having been a party to the alleged conspiracy.

Waived Jury

In the first "graft" trial, now ended, Defendants Donovan, Grennon and Cilley waived their right to a jury.

Judge Hanify's finding against Donovan and Grennon was announced immediately after arguments by council.

Donovan was convicted of extorting $5 from 20-year-old Della Roddy, a Brookline domestic, whom he and Grennon found in a parked automobile with a boy friend, Darius Giordano of Brookline.

Grennon was found guilty of conspiracy in the Roddy-Giordano case and of extortion and bribery in the case of two other auto parkers, Miss Bella MacDonald and Daniel MacLeod.

Summing up for the state, Assistant District Attorney Harold J. Smith called the actions of Donovan and Grennon "dastardly."

He said:

"Jesse James was an honorable robber, compared with these two defendants. He dealt at arms length with robbers and other racketeers. But men who take the bread out of the mouths of servant girls do not deserve the consideration of honest, decent citizens."

DUKE ASKED TO WED WALLY IN AUSTRIA

Vienna, April 24 (INS)—Sir Walford Selby, British minister to Austria, arrived at St. Wolfgang today and conferred with the Duke of Windsor on the latter's forthcoming marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

It was learned that Sir Walford submitted a request to the Duke from a high British personality that the Duke marry in Austria—not France—and after the end of May.

Grounds for this request was based on the fact that numerous British coronation visitors will be touring in France during the latter part of May, and that publicity at that time regarding the Duke's wedding would be "unwelcome."

London, April 24 (INS)—Publishers of the book "Coronation Commentary" to which the Duke of Windsor objected, have agreed to delete passages which displeased him, the Evening News stated today.

The volume is now out of print, according to the publishers, and the next edition will eliminate the portions to which the former King objected.

The Duke's lawyer had announce they would seek an injunction to restrain further publication unless such assurances were given.

'Dueling Doc' Cut But Wounds Foe

Budapest, April 24 (AP)—Hungary's indefatigable duelist, Dr. Franz Sarga, has disposed of a third opponent. The fiery doctor met Elemer Losonczy and wounded him in the head yesterday in an encounter with light sabers. The doctor himself suffered a cut shoulder.

Sarga challenged nine adversaries last autumn because he said they ridiculed his marriage to a wealthy belle. One other he wounded; the second he missed.

Bidwell, Author, War Writer, Dies

Hartford, Ct., April 24 (AP)—Daniel D. Bidwell, 70, veteran newspaperman and author, died today in Hartford Hospital after a short illness.

He was graduated from Yale in 1886 and joined the Springfield, Mass., Union. He later worked on Jacksonville, Fla., and New York newspapers, and came to Hartford in 1895 to join the staff of the Hartford Post and later the Hartford Times and Courant.

He was detained as a spy suspect in Boulogneseur-Mer, France, in 1915 and was cleared after a five-day investigation. During the World War he served as a war correspondent.

THIEVES' Faces Saved BY U. S,

WON'T NAME 4 OLD WOMEN

Washington, April 24 (INS)—The future of the "four old women" trapped by the Secret Service after robbing the treasury over an undetermined period of time continue uncertain today as the district attorney's office pondered action.

Identity of the women employes of the office of William A. Julian, treasurer of the United States, remained locked in the files of Leslie C. Garnett, the district attorney. It was reliably learned, however, that one of them is the wife of a Washington police official.

Garnett declined to announce his intentions regarding the women, who were discharged from the Treasury immediately when a secret service ruse disclosed the minor "racket" they have been operating. It was thought the secret service desired to further its inquiry into the matter and that Garnett would await completion of the investigation before taking action.

The Treasury reiterated that it was impossible to say how much money the women had appropriated, but it was believed not to exceed a few hundred dollars.

How It Worked

The "racket" operated as follows: Banks periodically ship to the Treasury worn-out or damaged currency. With their shipments they include a voucher noting the amount of money being sent. Infrequently a bank would send a few dollars more, by mistake, than was noted on the voucher.

The women watched these packages, and when a bank made a mistake they pocketed the difference between the sum in bills and the sum noted on the voucher.

Their downfall came when one bank several weeks after a shipment discovered its own mistake and applied for a refund. The Treasury checked and found its accounts tallied. It turned the matter over to the Secret Service, which sent a dummy "mistake" package containing marked bills through the mail to the treasurer.

The women took the difference, and the Secret Service took the women.

Robber Confesses Killing Nazi Chief

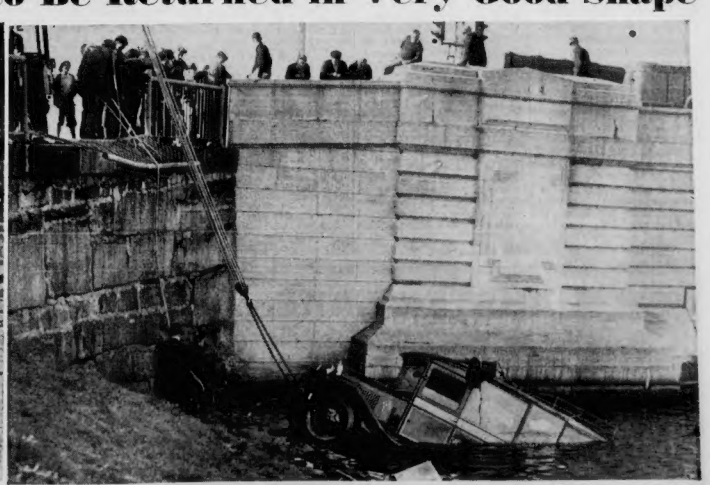
Buenos Aires, April 24 (AP)—Police announced today a small-time robber had confessed killing Josef Riedel, 37, German Nazi foreign organizer whose death Berlin had charged to "Communists." Felix Bucci, 28, confessed he and another man fired at Riedel when he attempted to resist a holdup. Reidel's watch was found on Bucci.

Ex-Queen Fined For Witchcraft

Serowe, Bechuanaland, South Africa, April 24 (AP)—Former Queen Bagakgametsi was sentenced to pay a $250 fine or serve one year in jail for witchcraft. She pleaded guilty to charges of trying to harm the queen mother by mystic potions and incantations.

Bread Cast Upon the Water Fails to Be Returned in Very Good Shape

When this Ward Bakery truck went over the Western avenue bridge into the Charles river this morning, a load of bread destined for Cambridge kitchens took an unexpected dunking. Officers of the M. D. C. police boat No. 1 are shown attempting to get a hold on the truck with grappling hooks in order to remove it. The driver, remarkably, escaped without injury.



Boston Evening American Photos

A wrecking crew is shown removing the bakery truck from the Charles river, pulling it up the embankment approach to the Western avenue bridge. The truck hurtled over the side of the bridge early today when the driver swerved to avoid striking another car. Crowds of curious gathered to watch the difficult process of hauling the heavy truck up the side of the bridge.

KODAK

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Reading about a man in Tennessee who has been fasting for forty-odd days got us to thinking about Mr. Herbert Igoe's fast-cure that was emaciating so many New Yorkers last summer that the humane society finally threatened interference.

Damon Runyon

Mr. Herbert Igoe is one of the deans of the sports authorities of the country, and normally a chap with a build like a pouter pigeon if you turned the pouter upside down. Mr. Igoe tends to what is called embonpoint.

Viewing Mr. Igoe in his current rotundity, it is difficult to realize that in his youth in San Francisco, he was so slight that a colored elevator boy in the old Bulletin building remarked one day:

"Mr. Igoe, you ain' no bigger en an hypodummick needle."

"Tad," the cartoonist, heard the remark, and from that day to this Mr. Herbert Igoe has been "Hype" to all who know him. But many a calory has flowed under the old bridgework since that happy time when Mr. Igoe had to stand twice in the same place to make a shadow.

Today it is best to stand off a piece from Mr. Igoe when he takes a full breath, lest a vest button hit you in the eye.

Vanishing Hype

We encountered Mr. Igoe one day last summer on Broadway and his appearance startled us. He was quite thin. His clothes, which usually fit him like the label on a lard pail, hung loosely about his frame. He was walking along very slowly.

"What's the matter?" we asked. "Been sick?"

"Sick?" said Mr. Igoe, indignantly. "I never felt better in my life. I feel wonderful."

"What makes you look so thin-like, then?" we asked.

"Why, I made myself thin," said Mr. Igoe. "I've been fasting to take off weight. You remember how beastly fat I was? Well, look here."

He pulled out the waistband of his trousers. You could have dropped a watermelon into the aperture. Mr. Igoe said he had not had anything to eat for 30 days, a statement we considered with a feeling akin to horror. No man alive likes his fodder any better than Mr. Igoe. Put him alongside a pot of pasta fagiole, a grate of spaghetti, and a peanel of veal scolapine, and he really can turn on.

Hot Orange Juice

"You haven't eaten anything at all?" we asked.

"Nothing," said Mr. Igoe. "All I take is hot orange juice three times a day. Just hot orange juice. That relieves the pangs of hunger while the fasting is knocking those pounds cock-eyed. I've lost 40 pounds. My, I feel good."

With this, Mr. Igoe essayed a double shuffle on the sidewalk by way of demonstrating his good feeling, but the effort was too much for his strength. He fell over, and we had to assist him to his feet.

"The city ought to fix these sidewalks," he said, as he tottered off.

Word of the way Mr. Igoe had lost weight flew over the town with speed of a rumor of a man's misdeeds. Hundreds of fat men looked him up to besieged him. Fat women besieged him. You heard everywhere of the Igoe discovery.

"Fasting, and hot orange juice three times a day, that is all," said Mr. Igoe. "Nothing else whatever."

Missed Chance

Presently there was such a terrific run on hot orange juice that Mr. Igoe found himself regretting that he did not have the foresight to get a piece of an orange grove somewhere.

He noticed, however, that his friends among the restaurant men of New York were commencing to eye him reproachfully. Nobody was buying food except skinny folks, and skinny folks do not eat much. That is why they are skinny.

There is no telling how far the craze might have gone if the authorities had not become uneasy, and requested Mr. Igoe to cease his advice, as formerly hale and hearty citizens were commencing to overwork the city ambulances by keeling over in the streets from malnutrition, due to fasting. By this time Mr. Igoe himself was in a wheelchair, and sinking.

The last time we saw Mr. Igoe, he was hooked up to a trencher of sirloin, smothered in barbecued pork chops, and was loosening the top buttons of his waistband. He said he had stopped fasting temporarily because he had become convinced that he was setting a bad example.

Warrior Folded

He said two incidents had convinced him. A young fighter training for a battle had heard Mr. Igoe's words, and had gone in for the hot orange juice fast while at his training, and the night of the fight he collapsed in the ring in the first round from weakness, and a punch on the chin.

"I wouldn't have cared so much," said Mr. Igoe, "but I had a bet on that guy. He didn't tell me he was fasting. As if this wasn't enough, the husband of a woman who had taken my fast-cure for fat and lost 80 pounds, came around and tried to slug me the other night. It took four men to hold him.

"That woman bothered the life out of me until I told her how to take my treatment. She said she had tried everything to get rid of her fat, and was pretty desperate.

"I had it rolling off of her in layers in no time. Then her husband comes around and gets tough with me about it. How could I know that he liked his wife fat?"

"Then you have given up fasting, and the hot orange juice for good?" we asked.

"I should say not," said Mr. Igoe. "I'm going to start in again as soon as I regain my strength."

Film Executive's Wife Wins Divorce

Reno, Nev., April 24 (AP)—Mrs. Margery F. Nast, daughter of the late Felix Feist, motion picture executive, won an uncontested divorce today from Myron C. Nast of Beverly Hills, Cal. Nast is a grand nephew of the late caricaturist, Thomas Nast.

FIGHT TO HALT NAZI EXECUTION OF AMERICAN

Berlin, April 24 (INS)—A grim 10-day race to—or from—the headsman's block started today between the American and German governments for the life of Helmut Hirsch, son of an American citizen, whose fate is now entirely in Hitler's hands.

In a cell off death row in Plotzensee prison the United States consul, Raymond H. Geist, called on Hirsch, convicted of high treason, this morning and informed him that he had the rights of an American citizen.

"Everything possible will be done in your behalf," the consul said.

Convinced that Hitler will reject any plea for clemency, Hirsch's only, and perhaps last, request was that Geist convey a message to Hirsch's parents in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

"Tell them that I am calmly awaiting death," he said. "I am fully prepared for it and they must not worry."

Chances of rescuing Hirsch from the headsman are understood in legal circles to be extremely slim.

Hirsch confessed, after his arrest at Stuttgart, "the purpose of the explosives found in his possession," it was said.

Unless Hitler intervenes, Hirsch will go to the block within 10 or 12 days, giving America little time to intervene.

The American consul will redouble his efforts Monday with Hirsch's defense attorney to win reconsideration of the case.

Buddha Wed to Beauty

Officiates at His Own Nuptials

Kyoto, Japan, April 24 (AP)—Performing his own wedding ceremony in the presence of 20,000 guests, Count Kocho Otani, the living Buddha of Japan and spiritual leader of 13,000,000 Japanese Buddhists, married a beautiful 19-year-old poet today.

The couhl, hereditary abbot of one of the largest Buddhist sects, celebrated ancient rituals that united him in marriage with Princess Yoshiko Tokudaija, granddaughter of the famous Prince Kimihito.

Then he distributed 1,500,000 yen ($420,000) to the poor while his tall bride gave away 1,600,000 classical fans.

Count Otani, attired in gorgeous brocaded medieval vestments, pronounced the sacred marriage ritual himself, for no lesser churchman was considered worthy to marry the living Buddha.

The bride wore 11 vari-colored kimonos, each on top of the others, surmounted by a short embroidered coat.

Mammoth bronze bells tolled over the wooded hills as two choruses of 700 priests chanted a liturgy. The ceremony was performed before a 30-foot gold statue of Buddha.

Auto Injures Boy; Sister Escapes

Only 30 minutes after his sister had narrowly escaped being hit by a truck, a 10-year-old Somerville boy was struck and injured today in another automobile accident.

Stanley O'Reilly, Jr., of Rogers avenue, was crossing the street near his home today when he was struck by a car, police said was operated by Douglass R. Potter of Baker street, Foxboro. He was taken to Somerville hospital.

His four-year-old sister, Edna, had just missed being hit by a truck on the same street, when the driver ran the heavy vehicle up onto a lawn to avoid hitting her.

Kentucky Youth Held in Killing

Grayson, Ky., April 24 (INS)—Twenty-year-old Eddie Romines was held as a material witness today as authorities sought a solution of the death of young Jimmy Scott, mysteriously shot with a rifle bullet as he played "postoffice" with Stella Stevens, 14.

Romines, according to Coroner C. W. Henderson, was a former admirer of the Stevens girl, at whose rural home the shooting occurred.

A Tree For Arbor Day

Arbor Day was celebrated by state and city officials today. In front of the left wing of the State House, Nancy Hurley, daughter of the governor, planted a tree. Her father, other members of the first family were nearby. Other trees were planted on Boston Common.

Stuyvesant Lost Leg 300 Years Ago

New York, April 24 (AP)—Today, just in case you've forgotten it, is the 300th anniversary of the firing of the cannon shot that knocked old Peter Stuyvesant off his pins when the Dutch met the Portugese at St. Martin's Island. He lost a leg as a result.

So, a lot of historical-minded men and women gathered late today at Stuyvesant's tomb in St. Mark's churchyard, down on the East Side.

Stuyvesant was governor of Curacao when he lost the leg.

The cannon ball knocked him down and he went back to Holland and had the injured leg removed. Then he got a peg leg from Scotland, a rather showy affair with silver bands, and soon afterwards he came to New Amsterdam, as these parts were called then, as the Dutch governor.

With his new leg, his stick, and his velvet pants, the natives were awed, but the British weren't and took the colony in 1664.

State Loses Point In Denhardt Trial

New Castle, Ky., April 24 (AP)—Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall today overruled the commonwealth's motion to strike from the record George Baker's statement that Brigadier-General Henry H. Denhardt "could not have killed" Mrs. Verna Carr Taylor.

Commonwealth's Attorney H. B. Kinsolving, Jr., moved to expunge the statement in the state's efforts to convict the bald, portly war veteran of the murder of his comely fiancee on a road near here last November 6.

2 Black Legion Men Get Prison Terms

Detroit, April 24 (AP)—Recorder's Judge John J. Maher sentenced two convicted Black Legion members today to serve from one to five years in the Detroit House of Correctio nfor conspiring to kill William W. Voisine, village president of Ecorse.

Jesse Pettijohn, former clerk of Ecorse township, and Lawrence Madden, Ecorse steel worker, were convicted by a jury two weeks ago.

Planting of Trees Marks Arbor Day

City and state observed Arbor Day today with the planting of trees on Boston Common and at the State House.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield and Mrs. Mansfield officiated at the planting of three trees on Boston Common.

Accompanied by Park Commissioner William P. Long and Dr. Seth Arnold, regent of the Royal Arcanum, the mayor and his wife planted an English elm near the Parkman bandstand, another along the Oliver Wendell Holmes walk and the third near Frog pond.

Nancy Hurley, five-year-old daughter of the governor, observed the day by planting a tree on the front lawn of the State House while her father looked on.

Arm Amputated, He Crawls to Aid

Fitchburg, April 24 (AP)—Attaches of Burbank Hospital here agreed today that Francis Gauthier, 21, of Winchendon, whose left arm was amputated, had courage.

Gauthier, they said, fell under a freight train as he was trying to board it last night. With his left arm dangling from the shoulder, he slid down an embankment, crawled toward the Nashua River, tumbled over an eight foot retaining wall into the stream, crawled back to the bank by scaling the perpendicular wall, then walked a quarter of a mile.

After failing against a cellar door of a house and waking the occupants he was sent to the hospital where his name was placed on the danger list.

Gas Fumes Kill Aged Brothers

Westfield, April 24 (AP)—William H. Bielefeld, 77, and his brother, Elwin G., 70, were found dead of illuminating gas in the kitchen of their home today. Medical Examiner E. R. Smith pronounced death probably accidental. Both were retired, they lived together.

MIAJA LOSES CIVIL POWER IN MADRID

By the Associated Press

Civil rule came back to Madrid today.

General Jose Miaja, the military dictator, was deprived of his civil powers over the city of the half-year siege and instructed to devote all his energies to fighting Francisco Franco's Insurgents.

An anti-Fascist city council took command of the city.

Low, black clouds stopped a 12-day Insurgent artillery bombardment which had taken the lives of more than 250 Madrilenos.

In the north the Insurgents pressed on El Orrio, one of the obstacles to their capture of Bilbao.

In Rome, it was announced Spain would be one of the subjects which German General Hermann Goering and Il Duce will talk about Monday. Some thought Mussolini was reconciled to a compromise on Spain, and would not help Franco any more.

Rebel Troops Advance Along Biscay Front

Sevilla, Spain, April 24 (INS)—Insurgent troops are victoriously advancing along the Biscay front, and have reached a point close to Durango, the rebel radio station here announced in a broadcast today.

3 More British Ships Out to Run Blockade

La Rochelle, France, April 24 (INS)—Three more British food ships sailed today to crash the rebel Spanish blockade of Loyalist Bilbao.

Back Home After 10 Years, Jailed For 6 Months

Seeking a reconciliation with his wife today after being away from home for 10 years cost George J. Mulkerin of Somerville six months in the House of Correction.

Returning to the house where he had left his wife and child, then two years old, a decade ago, Mulkerin attempted to patch up their differences and start married life anew.

Instead, his wife took him to the police station and had him charged with non-support on an old warrant in the files since he left home.

He disappeared three months after he had been ordered to pay $15 a week to his wife and child, for separate maintenance. In Somerville court today, Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant asked:

"You did not have any money in 10 years?"

"Only what I earned while working," Mulkerin replied.

"What did you earn while working," asked the judge.

"A hundred dollars a month."

"Why didn't you pay it? That wasn't a pittance, to send your wife anything in 10 years?"

Mrs. Mulkerin said she didn't want a reconciliation.

High Court Studies Security Case

Washington, April 24 (INS)—The Supreme Court may decide the question of constitutionality of a vital provision of the Federal Social Security Act—the federal unemployment insurance tax—at a secret conference today. The court will hold a decision period on Monday.

The tax issue was raised on appeal of the Charles Steward Machine Co. of Birmingham, Ala. A companion case is the appeal of the State of Alabama from a lower court ruling holding unconstitutional the state unemployment insurance tax law.

Another important provision of the Federal Social Security law—the old-age annuity tax—may be accepted by the court for review. The government appealed for a speedy review after the First Circuit Court at Boston held the provision invalid.

Worcester Man Heads Vets

North Adams, April 24 (AP)—Alexander C. Bennett of Worcester was elected commander of the 104th Infantry Veterans' Association today. Major Alfred F. Ballot was elected junior vice commander.

Mystery "G-Man" Held

JOSEPH MAHER CONRAD Y. BAKER

Conrad Y. Baker, with aliases, mystery man, arrested on charge of impersonating a G-man today aboard the steamship Steel Mariner, is shown being fingerprinted by Deputy U. S. Marshall Joseph Maher.

BACK BAY YOUTH HELD FOR POSING AS G-MAN

A young man with a military black beard, apparently well-educated and giving two addresses in the Back Bay, provided to be a puzzle today to federal authorities.

He was arrested and charged with impersonating a G-Man in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, after customs authorities said they found false and fraudulent documents in his quarters aboard the steamship Steel Mariner, which docked here today from the Orient with a valuable cargo.

Federal investigators sought to reconcile his background and education, with his position aboard the vessel as "ship's carpenter."

GIVES 2 ADDRESSES

Suave, soft-spoken, dressed in good tweeds and a slouch hat, the young man gave his name as Conrad Y. Barber. Documents found by customs authorities showed two aliases, Conrad Cariwright, and C. Cameron Cartwright.

When first apprehended, he gave an address in Beacon street, saying his mother lived there.

Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Harry N. Guterman, he said his home was in Myrtle street.

He waived reading of the charge of impersonating a G-Man, and pleaded not guilty.

"I was educated in a school just out of Concord," he told U. S. Commissioner Guterman. "I've been a seaman for the last six months, as ship's carpenter on an American vessel. I am now 28 years old."

BAIL PUT AT $5000

He asked for a conference with his counsel before answering further questions.

Bail was set at $5000 on the recommendation of Assistant U. S. Attorney Frank W. Tomasello, who said federal authorities intend to investigate possible further charges against the seaman.

Tomasello said other papers were found in his cabin on the ship, indicating that he was a lieutenant in the Massachusetts National Guard. An investigation shows that he is entitled only to the rank of private, Tomasello said.

Another card found in his effects would have entitled him to free transportation as a member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whereas he never belonged to the department, authorities said.

The man was questioned for four hours at the office of Thomas F. Finnegan, deputy collector of customs, before being brought into federal court.

He was remanded to the custody of the U. S. marshal, to await trial on May 7.

Jump-Rope Title Won by Girl, 12

Louise Toto, 12, of Endicott street, North End, eighth grade pupil at the Michelangelo school, today won the girls' jump-rope championship of the City of Boston.

The contest was held under the auspices of the park department at the Charles street mall.

Runner-up for the championship was Florence Leahy of Cedar street, Roxbury.

Twelve tests of rope jumping skill were given each of the 22 entrants. Each entrant was the champion rope jumped of her district of the city.

Ship Sights Bergs Off Cape Race

St. John's Newfoundland, April 24 (AP)—Huge icebergs, several towering 200 feet above the surface and described as a menace to shipping, were reported today off Cape Race by the steamship Belle Isle which docked here from Halifax.

The master of the vessel said the icebergs, which were numerous, forced the ship several miles off its course. Some, he said, were 400 feet long.

STABBING CASE CONTINUED; MAN HELD

Lowell, April 24—Arraigned in chambers on charges of stabbing with intent to murder a 23-year-old school teacher, Leonard Earl Miller, 30, a WPA worker and former mill hand, pleaded not guilty today. He was ordered held in $2000 bail by Judge Frederick A. Fisher.

On request of police, the case was continued to next Saturday, and Miller was ordered to East Cambridge jail.

Miller was arrested by police of Mattapan station in Boston last night, after he allegedly had stabbed Miss Florida Thomas of 20 Lilley avenue, a music teacher employed on a WPA project, 14 times with an ice pick.

Miss Thomas told police he stabbed her because she spurned his advances. She remained in St. John's Hospital today, where her condition was reported as not critical.

The alleged attack took place outside St. Stanislaw's school, here, where Miss Thomas, an accomplished pianist, teaches music to WPA classes.

Miller, the girl's alleged assailant, was arrested near Augusta, Me., only a few weeks ago, on her complaint.

She told police there that Miller had carried her off by force in his automobile and that he had forced his attentions on her after threatening her with a knife.

Arraigned in court in Augusta, Miller was let off with a suspended sentence.

Stolen Clothing Found Under Steps

Patrons of a Dudley street tailor shop in Roxbury will be able to get their Sunday clothes tonight, thanks to three patrolmen of Dudley street station.

The tailoring shop of Isadore Schwartz was broken into yesterday and a number of articles of men's and women's clothing taken.

Today, while searching in the vicinity of Dennis street, Patrolmen Carlos Dunford, Luke Farley and Thomas Early discovered part of a dress caught on a flower bush. Under the steps of the house they discovered all the loot and returned it to the tailor.

Polar Explorer Dies

Oslo, Norway, April 24 (AP)—Commodore Scott Hansen, 63, who accompanied the late Dr. Fridtjof Nansen on a polar expedition in 1893, died today.

May Irwin Is Dying At 76

She Made Laughter Rock the World

MAY IRWIN

New York, April 24 (AP)—Death was a stageband today, awaiting the curtain cue for jolly, buxom May Irwin who sang happiness into a million hearts.

Young America did not know her. She sang to their elders—sang throatily, gustily, cleanly. That was in the 80's, the 90's and the naughty-naughtys—the days of John Drew, Otis Skinner, the "good old days" of the theater.

Today May Irwin, retired for many years but a laughing memory to those who remember her "Frog Song," her "Hear Dem Bells," and all the many others, lies critically ill at her farm home that snuggles close to the border of the Canada in which she was born 76 years ago.

Today word came from Clinton that her condition had improved.

Many who remember her well would call her America's first comedienne. Her long life in the theater was a rollicking carnival of laughter.

Laughs were her specialty, yet like the other great performers of her day she was not a specialist. An actress must be versatile. There must be tears behind the proscenium as well as laughter.

So Jolly May Irwin, who sang:

"Just lots of folks are like that little frog o' mine,
"Gettin' into trouble just to pass the time—"
Could also bring a lump to the throat with:
"After the ball is over,
"After the break of dawn—."

BROTHER SAYS GABLE UNLIKE BILLINGS

London, April 24 (INS)—Frank Billings, the man named by Mrs. Violet Wells Norton as the father of her daughter, Gwendoline, is not Clark Gable.

That was made emphatically clear today by Frank Billings' brother, Harry, a 40-year-old London fireman, after news reached here that Mrs. Norton had been convicted of mail fraud in Los Angeles for contending Gable is the Frank Billings with whom she claimed to have had a romantic affair in 1922 and 1923.

According to Harry, Frank Billings has no dimples like Gable's. Furthermore, he is only five feet nine and is a man of frail physique. Said Harry:

"I would stake my life that Frank is not Gable. There is a slight facial resemblance, but their physique is entirely different.

"Frank was invalidated from the army owing to shell shock and went to my poultry farm. He managed it until I came out of the navy. He went to the United States in 1923 as valet for a Belgian millionaire."

Mrs. Norton Faces 5-Year Jail Term

Los Angeles, April 24 (U8)—May 4 has been set as the date on which Mrs. Violet Wells Norton must appear before Federal Judge George Cosgrove here to learn whether she shall spend the next five years of her life in prison.

The buxom Englishwoman also faces a fine of $1000 after being found guilty of using the mails to defraud Clark Gable, film star, on the charge that he was the father of her 14-year-old daughter, Gwendoline. She can be imprisoned and fined as well.

Mrs. McMahon Dies in Brighton

Following a two-week illness, Mrs. Cornelia G. McMahon, wife of Thomas F. McMahon, plumbing contractor, died today of a heart ailment at her home, 86 Oak square avenue, Brighton.

She was formerly a member of the Boston Board of Public Welfare and was slated to succeed the late Dr. Charles Mackey as a member of the school committee provided a bill now before the legislature was enacted.

Bullitt to Drink, Sing at Club Initiation

Paris, April 24 (INS)—William C. Bullitt, United States ambassador to France, is expected to drink a watering can of wine until it "overflows his clothes"—that is if he goes through with his scheduled initiation into the Bergundy Wine Drinking Club, "confrerie des tastevins" here tomorrow.

According to rules of this picturesque and ritualistic drinking ceremony, to be held in the courtyard of the Chateau Clos Vougeot, initiates must drink from a long-spouted watering-can, filled with choice vintage, until it overflows.

Club officials are a bit dubious about this phase of the ceremony in view of the dignity of Bullitt's position.

Ambassador or no ambassador, Bullitt will have to sing a solo according to the ritual. First he will be annointed by 12 scarlet-robed factotums who will hang a silver cup around his neck.

At a luncheon Bullitt will speak extemporaneously before English and American newspapermen and photographers.

Restrain Sharkey's Dog in Attack

Accused of nipping the leg of a Boy Scout biker, Mickey, a chow dog belonging to Jack Sharkey, ex-world heavyweight champion, was under restraint today, by police order.

Newton authorities said Mickey bit John A. Parrish, 13, of Royal street, Allston.

Mrs. Sharkey, wife of the boxer, promised to keep Mickey in close confinement; to be examined by City Veterinarian C. Arthur Boutelle at the Sharkey home

ASKS ARMS BAN EXTENSION

Washington, April 24 (INS)—As congressional conferees reached an impasse on neutrality legislation, a move to extend the present act for one year was begun today by Senator Thomas (D.), of Utah.

Thomas said he will introduce a resolution Monday extending and amending the present ban on shipments of arms, ammunitions and implements of war. He would write into the present law prohibitions against arming American merchant vessels in time of war and against travel of American citizens on vessels of belligerent nations.

Senator Pittman (D.), of Nevada, chairman of the foreign relations committee, however, forecast that an agreement by conferees would be reached in a few days.

Link Ronnie's Slayer to Girl Kidnaping

Chicago, April 24 (INS)—Police here renewed their hunt today for Robert Irwin, young sculptor sought for the triple Easter morning murders in New York, following the kidnaping of a Kalamazoo (Mich.) girl who was forced to drive her ragged, unshaven captor here at the point of a knife.

Released on a side street when her abductor stepped from her automobile, Miss Josephine Howe, 24, told police of her terrifying 135-mile ride.

Shown pictures of Irwin, Miss Howe said he resembled the abductor. Her description of the man's build also indicated he might have been the neurotic sculptor, called the slayer of Ronnie Gedeon, pretty model.

Miss Howe, department manager for the Kalamazoo Utility Company, was seized yesterday in downtown Kalamazoo, 20 miles from where Irwin last was definitely reported in the Middle West.

Driving a company car, Miss Howe had stopped for a traffic light when the unkempt abductor slid into the seat beside her and pressed a knife to her ribs. She quoted the man as saying:

"Go straight ahead, and say nothing. Don't try any funny stuff, or I'll finish you."

Hiccoughs Halted After Four Days

Southbridge, April 24 (AP)—Still critically ill with pneumonia, Zephirin Cournoyer, 38, today was virtually without the hiccoughs which have wracked him since last Saturday.

Stricken with pneumonia Friday last week, he developed the hiccoughs Saturday, according to Dr. William E. Langevin, and for four days the paroxysms were constant.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

All Who Have Problems Are Invited to Write To This Column

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Have you a problem? Is there something in your life that defies solution? Do you really need the help of another?

If so, write to me. For many, many years—perhaps, even before you were born—I have devoted my life to guiding those in distress. Therefore, I think I can help you, either through this column or by means of a personal letter.

Often, I try to make one letter dealing with a typical problem answer scores of inquiries. That, actually, is the purpose of the column. But if yours is a DIFFERENT problem, one that is peculiar to you, I shall address my reply directly to you.

And, dear friends, don't hesitate to confide in me or to heed my advice. Whatever you tell me will be a secret forever between you and me. I know it helps a lot to share one's grief with another and to know that the other will understand and do whatever is possible to do.

So write me, dear friends, whenever you want my help.

Here are a few replies to readers who have written me long and interesting letters, too personal for publication:

E. L. B.—There is no harm in a young girl's writing to a boy. There are so many things that you can discuss that your letters should be interesting and ought to lead to real friendship, possibly marriage. However, I caution you, DON'T begin by writing burning phrases that ought to be printed on asbestos paper. In other words, don't write anything you may regret later on.

MISS M. D.—It is foolish to concern yourself with trifles. If you are going through life worrying about everything friends may do or say, you are certain to face many unhappy hours. It is a mistake for a young woman to put herself completely under the domination of another young woman. It is better to have several friends and to preserve a healthy independence.

FREDERICK P.—Remember, son, that really there are no "foreigners" in America. We are all the sons and daughters of men and women who came here from other countries. That is, if we did not come ourselves. If I were you, I wouldn't pay too much attention to my chum's father. Ignore him. That's the thing to do.

MARION—If you are wise, you'll find out definitely whether your old friend is married before you resume your correspondence. His wife might see the letters and, then, you would have a lot of explaining to do. Also, you never thought of writing to this man while you were living happily with your husband. Now that you are divorced you want to revive the old romance. I doubt that you will succeed. No man likes to play "second fiddle."

EDWARD—You are much too young to be thinking seriously of girls. If you take my advice, you will attend to your school work and prepare yourself for the job of supporting a wife when you are old enough to have one. Go out with the young men of your own age. Enjoy your youth. It passes quickly, you'll learn later.

CATHERINE—Try the Boston Evening Clinic at 452 Beacon street. One of the doctors there will advise you. It is an excellent and worthy organization.

UNDECIDED PAT—You are well named. The fortunate thing about love is you know when you have it, and you also know when you haven't. Obviously, you are not in love. Accept the invitations of this Buddy you write about. He is the boy for you.

MISS T. G.—If you are wise, you'll take your father's advice and meet several young men. Don't make the foolish mistake of tying yourself to a boy that just can't hold a job. I admit these are difficult times and having no job is not a disgrace. But, just the same, three years is much too long to remain unemployed.

MRS. H.—There is nothing wrong about a married woman's riding once or twice with a gentleman. But I would not make it a steady practice. Certainly your husband would have reason to object violently. He might even ask you to meet him in the divorce court.

MISS N.—Cartooning is a very difficult and much-overcrowded profession. My advice to your friend would be to hold his steady job and, in his spare hours, take samples of his work to various editors. A personal call is important.

ALIC—You are right. When a man and woman are coming out of a theater they walk either side by side or the man steps aside to allow the woman to walk ahead of him.

BEATRICE—In case of an annulment of the marriage so soon after the wedding it would be proper to return the gifts. Write a brief letter of explanation to each of those who sent presents. They will understand.

A. B. C.—I agree with you. A marriage like yours cannot promise happiness. Have a frank talk with your husband. Probably when he realizes that you are his wife and not his slave, he'll be more agreeable. I can't see how you made such a mistake. You should have learned more about this man's character during your seven-year courtship. Write again. Tell me what you decide to do. I'll help you all I can.

Additional awards include 48 sets on Nu-Lok men's dress accessories, with the clever patented lock.

Gypsy Swirl of Skirt

IN THIS lace dance frock it's the lovely hyacinthine color that catches the eye first, and then the dramatic skirt—slick as can be to the knees, whence it takes off in a gitana swirl that will surely delight that streak of gypsy in you.

There is the smooth sophistication of the deep halter decolletage to belie the innocence of its hyacinth coloring. Horsehair stiffens the skirt hem in wide bells. If yours is to be a late-spring honeymoon that entails big white boats and mysterious southerly isles, you should have it. Miss Alice Scofield models; a Fashion Congress selection.

For shopping information (the frock is quite inexpensive), phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

THE GIRL ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WITH contour control that is nothing short of perfect, the daring young maid on the flying trapeze has the slim, tapered figure of a boy, and the throat of a Greek goddess.

Eileen Larey, noted circus aerialist, believes trapeze work to be unexcelled for the development of a beautiful figure.

While we can't all join the circus, Miss Larey says that any woman can have a lovelier figure by practicing a milder form of the gymnastics staged at the top of the big tent.

In the aerialist's traveling kit is a horizontal bar which can be secured to a doorway. This is the air star's practice bar while traveling—and a similiar one can help you to beautify your figure.

Just hanging to the bar will pull the bulge from your waistline and strengthen the arm and shoulder muscles. In two or three weeks you will be able to chin yourself . . . and then the real workout begins.

Grasp the bar with the hands turned forward to get the most benefit from the workout. Keeping the feet together, move the legs at the hips and slowly bring them forward to form a right angle with the body. Then, just as slowly move the legs back to the original vertical position.

When your muscles become strong enough, chin yourself at the same time you raise the legs to the right angle position.

"Beating" is part of the circus performer's warming-up exercise, and is excellent for hip and abdominal muscles. Kick the air with vigorous movements of the legs from the hips.

Then, keeping the feet together, kick backward from the hips. This kicking movement automatically brings the head backward to give more stretch to the waist, abdomen and throat muscles, while slimming down hips incorporated.

Eileen Larey flies through the air with the greatest of ease because of her beautifully supple muscles. The same strong muscles give her these streamlined measurements: Bust, 31 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 32 inches. Incidentally, these are the measurements of a modern, airminded mother, for Eileen has a six-year-old daughter.

If you want to acquire a perfect figure, get a horizontal bar and stretch. There are a number of stretching bars on the market. You will find various types at the department stores and at gymnasium equipment houses.

Send for the leaflet "Stretch the Fat from Your Waistline, Ribs and Wishbone" and practice the exercises regularly for lovelier measurements. Enclose a stamped, addressed envelope with your request for the leaflet, and address Ida Jean Kain, Boston Evening American.

AERIAL STAR GIVES BEAUTY HINTS

Bridge

Side-Tracked On 'Ice-Cold' Contract

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It's very easy to get side-tracked at bridge.

South got the most favorable possible opening lead and concentrated on the club suit.

But thereby he lost sight of the fact that he could afford to lose only two tricks. Result: Down two at an "ice-cold" contract.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♢	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
3 ♢	Pass	Pass	Pass

The contract was a sound one, but it should be pointed out that three notrumps would have been a more normal contract. South's decision to play for eleven tricks at his solid suit, however, cannot be criticized.

West, fearing that the dummy would be short of some suit, opened a trump to cut down a possible crossruff. South won, and drew two rounds of trumps. He decided that the club suit would furnish enough discards for the hearts and, therefore, continued with the Queen of clubs.

East made a standard hold-up play by letting the Queen of clubs hold. Had he taken the trick, Southwould have discarded his losing hearts on dummy's clubs.

At this point South made a fatal error of taking another club finesse. This time East won with the King, and returned a heart. Now South no longer had an entry to dummy and his spade lead was taken by West's Ace, after which the defenders cashed two heart tricks.

After winning the Queen of clubs, South should have led the Jack of spades. He would be able to discard one heart on dummy's extra spade, and he could well afford to lose one spade trick and one heart trick.

ROD HAS SOLUTION FOR MOUNTAIN TRIP SOLVED

CHAPTER 255

I WAS struggling with an almost irresistible impulse to audible laughter by the time Roderick had finished outlining the plan he had concocted to give Katherine a chance to go with me on the trip to the White Mountain peaks.

The scheme of having Mrs. Gibbs take Katherine's place in caring for Faith while we were gone was so patently based upon his desire to have Betty Gibbs share the exile which was his punishment that it was deliciously ludicrous.

"Do you think you'll be talking to Mrs. Gibbs pretty soon about it?" Roderick asked with a child's impatient desire to be assured that some cherished project is assured of fulfillment.

SCOTTIE CAN'T GO

"Don't you think you would better go back to Junior and Scottie now?" I suggested. "Later, when Mr. Williams isn't needed for Noel, he will take you out fishing, but that won't be for a while yet. I would suggest that you play hard enough with Scottie, so when you go fishing he won't be begging to go in the boat."

Roderick's face was suddenly aghast.

"You mean Scottie can't go in the boat with us when we go fishing?" he cried.

"Not at first," I said firmly. "Of course, if Mr. Williams is willing that the dog should go along when he takes you, I shan't object. But I am pretty sure that he will not wish to take him for the first excursion.

"You see, the lake is very different from the beach where you have had Scottie in the boat. That was level sand and shallow water. Here there are rocks and holes. Until you learn the lake, and how to avoid the danger spots, we can't complicate matters by having the dog in the boat with you."

Salad Bowl Again Comes Into Its Own

Spring and 'Greens' Synonymous

By MARTHA LEE

WITH the coming of spring we just naturally think of salads, don't you?

Not that we haven't been able to have our "greens" during the winter months but a bowl of salad does more for a lazy appetite than a big dose of sulphur and molasses.

The thing we cooks like about salad is the fact that we can let our imagination run wild and the result is sure to be good and colorful, especially if we have on hand the fresh foods that are being featured in the markets now.

Salads that have a combination of meat or fish with vegetables makes a healthful and hearty luncheon dish that the whole family will give a vote of praise and ask for more.

Why not try a seafood salad plate with a salad accompaniment for luncheon some time.

SEAFOOD SALAD PLATE
Scallops or fish flakes, poached
Shrimp
Crab or lobster meat
Sardines
French Dressing
Hard-cooked egg
Celery Hearts
Mayonnaise Dressing

All the fish used for this salad with the exception of the scallops can be canned. Canned fish flakes may be used in place of scallops. Remove dark lines from shrimps and bones from the crab or lobster. Marinate each fish with a little sharp French dressing or lemon juice. Arrange on plate around a lettuce cup of salad dressing. Garnish with sliced egg and celery.

VEGETABLE SALAD WITH SALAMI
Sliced cooked carrots
Cooked or canned peas
Cooked or canned green beans
French Dressing
Lettuce
Salami

Combine equal parts of carrots, peas and green beans and marinate in a little well-seasoned French dressing. Serve on lettuce and garnish with sliced salami cut into thin strips.

Do you know how to make a real German potato salad? This salad can be served hot or warm and is excellent if served with cubes of boiled tongue.

GERMAN POTATO SALAD
1 onion
2 slices bacon
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 teaspoon salt
dash of pepper
1 teaspoon flour
½ cup mild vinegar
4 cooked potatoes, sliced hot

Chop the bacon and fry it, add the onion which has been chopped fine. When the onion is brown add the flour and mix smooth. Add vinegar and seasoning. Let this sauce come to a boil and pour over the diced potatoes. Mix well and serve while hot. Add cold tongue if desired or serve with slices of cold meat.

With any of the above salads serve one of these accompaniments.

CORN STICKS
1 cup sifted flour
1 cup cornmeal
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 tablespoon shortening, melted

Mix and sift flour, cornmeal, soda and salt. Combine egg and milk; add to flour mixture, stirring until well mixed. Stir in shortening. Turn into greased bread-stick pans and bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) for 15 to 20 minutes. To use sweet instead of sour milk, substitute 2 teaspoons baking powder for soda. For cornbread, bake in greased, shallow pan in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. Approximate yield: 12 corn sticks or 8 portions.

CHEESE TEA BISCUITS
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne
½ pound American cheese
⅓ cup butter
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons ground pecans

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Put cheese through food chopper and mix thoroughly with butter and flour to a firm paste. Turn out on lightly floured board and pat ¼ inch thick. Cut into round or fancy shapes. Brush with egg and sprinkle with pecans. Place on greased baking sheet and bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 15 to 20 minutes. Approximate yield: 3 dozen small tea biscuits.

ROQUEFORT CRUMPETS
1 package cream cheese (3 oz.)
1½ ounce Roquefort cheese
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons light cream
1 loaf bread

Thoroughly blend the cream cheese and Roquefort with the Worcestershire sauce; add cream to make a spreading consistency. Cut very thin slices lengthwise from the bottom of the loaf of bread, trim crusts and cut each slice in half, making it four or five inches long. Spread each slice with the cheese mixture, roll up like jelly roll and fasten with toothpicks. Just before serving, toast under the broiler, turning often so that all sides are slightly browned. Serve hot. Approximate yield: 12-20 rolls.

BACON CHEESE STICKS
2 bread crusts
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup grated American cheese
6 slices bacon

Cut from each bread crust 3 strips about 1 inch wide and 4 inches long. Butter lightly, then roll in grated cheese until completely covered. Wrap bacon slices around each piece and place under broiler until bacon is crisp, about 5 to 6 minute, turning once. Serve immediately. Approximate yield: 6 sticks.

Plan Your Wedding

WHAT kind of wedding would you like? The stately dignity of a church ceremony?

The friendly simplicity of a home or garden wedding? Either can be lovely. Let your taste and pocketbook decide.

Suppose you want to be married in church, wearing the traditional bridal gown with train and veil. Every detail must harmonize. So consider the expense.

Your family pays for the bridal outfit, engraved invitations, floral decorations, fees of organist and sexton, all expenses connected with the church, gifts and, usually, bouquets for the bridal attendants.

You select the style and color of your attendants' gowns, hats and slippers, but they pay for them. Will style and color be becoming to them? Can they afford the costumes you select?

At a formal daytime wedding the groom, best man and ushers wear formal day clothes—cutaway coats, striped trousers. For the formal evening wedding, they wear full evening attire with "tails."

An informal wedding can be just as lovely. You have a simple organdy dress with picture hat or short veil. Or you may wear your going-away costume. The groom wears a business suit—or at a summer home or garden wedding, blue coat, white flannel trousers. Your mother may write informal notes inviting the guests.

Whichever type of wedding you choose, plan all details ahead of time so that your best when the great moment arrives. Our 40-page booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding," gives etiquette for invitations and announcements, receptions, breakfasts, costumes and expenses.

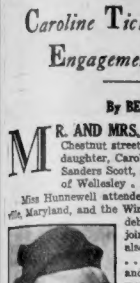
Caroline Ticknor Hunnewell's Engagement Announced

By BETTY ALDEN

MR. AND MRS. JAMES M. HUNNEWELL of Chestnut street announce the engagement of their daughter, Caroline Ticknor Hunnewell, to Richard Sanders Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Scott of Wellesley . . .

Miss Hunnewell attended St. Timothy's School in Catonsville, Maryland, and the Winsor School . . . After making her debut in the season of 1930-31 she joined the Vincent Club, and she is also a member of the Chilton Club . . . She is a niece of Miss Caroline and Miss Edith Slade Ticknor of Jamaica Plain, and of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Ticknor of Brookline . . .



DOROTHY HARDING

Mr. Scott attended Groton School and graduated from Harvard in 1927 . . . He is a member of the Porcellian Club and is associated with the Fiduciary Trust Company in New York . . . He is a brother of Robert L. Scott who is to be married in June to Barbara Chisholm of New York . . .

* * *

Callaway-Harding

TODAY'S SOCIETY BRIDES made no compromise in setting the time for their weddings . . . and as they both choose to be married at four o'clock, friends who were invited to both have to do some picking and choosing to decide which one to attend . . .

Both are large church weddings . . . that of Peggy Woodworth to Stuart Scott, Jr., taking place in Emmanuel Church on Newbury street . . . and Dorothy Harding's marriage to Samuel R. Callaway being solemnized at the same time in the First Parish Church in Brookline . . .

Dorothy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Austin Harding of Chestnut Hill, who are giving a large wedding reception at their home . . . Mr. Harding is escorting his lovely daughter to the altar, where she will be awaited by the bridegroom and his brother, John MacIntosh Callaway, best man and keeper of the wedding ring . . .

Dorothy has chosen a wedding gown of traditional bridal satin which falls around her ankles in graceful folds and is clouded with an heirloom lace veil . . . her flowers are lilies of the valley . . .

Symphony Features French Music

By RUTH MARSTERS

It was in a program of divers French music, ranging from Berlioz to Roussel, that Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at yesterday afternoon's concert in Symphony Hall.

The "Rapsodie Flamande," with which the contemporary composer was represented, had not previously been performed in the United States.

One of Roussel's most recent works, it is a departure from his usual tendencies in both form and subject matter while none the less characteristic of his highly individual personality.

The "Rapsodie" takes its thematic material from Flemish folk tunes which are linked within a structure solidly built. Though not dependent upon orchestral color for affect, the instrumentation is peculiarly significant.

The program opened with Vincent d'Indy's Symphonic Variations "Istar," based on the Babylonian poem of that name.

In this superbly descriptive music, d'Indy has altered the musical form in accordance with the poetic idea. As Istar journeys through the seven gates "toward the abode whences there is no return" the variations, quite logically in this case, work backward toward the theme.

The whole is ornamented and enhanced by orchestral color in a way that was d'Indy's own.

Following this Dr. Koussevitzky conducted a performance of "Psyche 'borne away by Zephyrs" from Franck's Symphonic Poem, "Psyche" in which the strings of the orchestra were never more silver-threaded.

But it was for the larger sonorities of Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," which concluded the program, that the audience reserved its warmest enthusiasm.

Certainly there is much in this music to entertain—there is the fantasy itself.

The true value of the piece, however, must lie in the advances it made in the technique of orchestration, the beginnings it established for new forms, rather than in its intrinsic value as a work of art.

The "Fantastic Symphony" inevitably brings to mind Olin Downes' description of the "redhaired madman." "There is something very splendid about him, and very heroic, and a little ridiculous and pathetically lonely."

English Soaps Perfumed With Spring Flowers

By ARLINE GOULD

CORONATION or no Coronation, England's guidebook to feminine loveliness has always been . . . and always will be . . . soap.

It's little wonder then when England thinks of soaps she goes slightly delirious.

Long used by the royal families in many countries around the world, a trio of perfumed soaps have become known as the aristocracy in soap.

They can now be purchased in Boston, and while their price is naturally a bit higher than some other varieties, we like to think of them as something of an economy. Why? For one thing the process of their manufacture produces such a hard milled cake that it lasts twice as long as other kinds.

April violettes . . . fresh and woodsy . . . gardenia and jasmin perfumes have been selected with scrupulous care and added to them. The colors are fresh, vibrant and fashioned to harmonize with dressing and bathroom accessories. Both color and odeur will last as long as the soap—down to a tiny sliver.

Among the lovely colors to choose from are sea blue, turquoise green, lilac, violet, olive green . . . and strawberry red. And the cakes are molded into various sizes, too.

With hats showing off more hair and curls than usual, gleaming waves and smooth shiny curls are all the rage. If you want to enjoy a new and fragrant hair treatment, try a shampoo with these toilet soaps.

A heavy, creamy lather gives your hair a true spring cleaning and lovely sheen, while the perfumes add a caress of fragrance that lingers on day after day.

To learn the name of these exquisite toilet soaps that are made, wrapped and sealed in England, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Roller Skating Party To Benefit Charity

OLD CLOTHES and the whir of hundreds of pairs of skates will be the background for one of the gayest charity fetes —a roller skating party at Moseley's-on-the-Charles—Thursday evening.

The affair, one of the newest of the spring season, is being sponsored by the Junior Aid of Boston. In charge of arrangements are Kay Pugh and Eleanor Campbell.

An attractive group of girls planning many novelties include: Dorothy Mulloney, Jaye Walsh, Edna Purcell, Mary Carr, Eleanor Heane, Beverly Trundy, Geraldine Ferris and Dorothy O'Connor.

Also helping on the committee are Margaret Brown, Mary Norton, Evelyn O'Neal and Natalie Trundy.

Sinusitus Is Modern Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Nasal sinusitis is one of the most common diseases of modern times.

Many diseases have been known for centuries, but few references to what may have been sinusitis are made in old textbooks.

It may well be that changes in our habits and mode of living are responsible for many of the present-day diseases, including this.

The sinuses are hollow spaces or cavities found in the bony structure of the head and face. These spaces are lined with mucous membrane and communicate with the interior of the nose into which they drain.

If this lining membrane becomes inflamed or infected, congestion and obstruction follow, with the familiar symptoms of sinusitis.

As a rule, this disturbance can be traced to a head cold, coryza, inflammation of the upper air passages or some constitutional disease.

Unfortunately, not every case of sinusitis is a mild one. In many instances there is pus formation, and then the infection persists for months and even years. When this occurs, the condition is known as "chronic sinusitis."

The victim of sinusitis is sensitive to changes of temperature and weather. He is extremely susceptible to colds and infections of the upper air passages. Persistent attacks of headache, facial neuralgia, nasal catarrh and difficulty in breathing are other symptoms of this disorder.

Due to the absorption of toxins or pus from the infected sinus, the victim may suffer from arthritis, backache, indigestion, constipation and other disorders.

The pus forming in a sinus may rupture through the thin wall that separates it from the brain, the eye socket or a large blood vessel. Severe blood poisoning or dangerous infection of the eye, brain or other organs may follow this accident.

'Call It a Day'

By Lewis Allen Browne

(From the screen play by Casey Robinson, adapted from the famous stage hit, by Dodie Smith. A Cosmopolitan Production, to be released soon by Warner Bros.)

(SYNOPSIS)

"The first Spring day is in the devil's pay," they say in Merrie England. This seems to hold true in the household of Dorothy and Roger Hilton, in a London suburb.

Roger has an alleged business date with a notorious actress; Dorothy meets a strange man and hopes to see him again; Martin, the son, has a strange wanderlust that spells trouble; Ann, the littlest daughter, reads Rossetti in bed and thinks she is psychic, while Catherine, eldest daughter, is love-crazy over a married artist and is to meet him on a wooded hill this night.

Dorothy is soon to meet the strange man who thrilled her, and the actress has invited Roger to come to her apartment.

CHAPTER TWELVE

"If you are not afraid of me, then you'll come to my apartment," Beatrice Gwynne said, rolling her eyes at Roger.

"But, my dear girl, we met only five minutes ago and you try to make me believe that you love me."

Her practiced smile answered that one. She stood up and held out her cloak. He put it about her.

"At seven thirty," she said, and wrote her address on a memo pad.

"Very well, er—perhaps you will be more settled in your mind then and we can get through with your tax muddle. But how about your theater?"

"I shall put my understudy on."

"Very well, Miss Gwynne, at seven thirty."

He walked to the door with her. As soon as she was gone, Elsie came in smiling. Roger hastily tore the address from the memo pad and pocketed it.

"You did make her talk business, despite the sea, didn't you," she said, happily.

"Oh, yes, we—er—got along rather speedily," Roger answered, but he stared guiltily out of the window as he spoke.

Muriel had finished her "confessions" to Dorothy. They had been disappointingly tame. Muriel's married "skeleton in the closet" had not been at all dismal.

"Sir thirty!" Muriel exclaimed, "Frank must have gotten himself run over." She put on her shoes. "I have to run, really."

And then Frank Harris entered.

"I—er—met some chaps—er—"

"A fine host! Where have you been?" Muriel cried.

"I—er—met some chaps—er—"

A Reunion!

"I know. Frank, this is Dottie Hilton."

He hadn't seen her. He turned slowly and then started in surprise. A smile illuminated his face.

"I say—you!"

"What's this?" Muriel asked.

"We met, by accident, as a green grocer's shop," Dorothy explained.

"Good enough, I must toddle, since you know each other."

She gathered up her packages. Dorothy picked up her hat.

"No, no—please—not yet," Harris pleaded.

"Go ahead and get acquainted with him, Dottie. There's no harm in a million of him," Muriel said, and she laughed as she slipped out of the door.

Harris was suddenly embarrassed, despite his delight at seeing the beautiful woman he had bumped into.

"Er—some tea. I say, do sit down. You, too, please."

"Yes, I'm not afraid of getting fat."

Dorothy smiled at him.

"No no. I must say you looked much stouter in that snapshot Muriel sent me."

"Did she? I didn't know."

"When I saw you this morning, holding those radishes—" he poured the tea—"I thought you the most beautiful woman in the world. Now I am sure of it."

Dorothy choked on a cracker.

"Really, I don't quite—"

"And I did my sister an injustice. Her judgment is perfect. I was afraid that her plan to just—you know—as fingers would be awkward, we might not have liked each other. But we do, don't we?"

"Well, really, Mr. Harris—"

Dorothy's cheeks were pink.

"I say, I'll make a clean breast of it. When Muriel telephoned me that she was bringing Dolly Wilton here I just bolted until I thought you'd be gone."

"Dolly? No one calls me Dolly, Mr. Harris."

"Oh come—call me Frank, please. Frank and Dolly, eh, what?"

"But Muriel always calls me Dotty."

"I am sure she called you 'Dolly' to me."

"Oh!" Dorothy was beginning to see a light.

"I won't try to rush you, embarrass you. Tomorrow we'll go on a trip in the country. I'm positively crazy about you, whether it is Dolly or Dotty."

Harris moved around to her and held her plump hand.

"Oh, I'm so sorry—stop, Mr. Harris, let me explain. I am Dorothy Hilton, not Dolly Wilton!"

"Eh!"

Dorothy nodded and regarded him ruefully, and pity is often akin to love.

"Oh—Oh, I see—I've been quite an ass, haven't I."

"You see, I have a husband, and grown-up children. I'm terribly sorry."

Harris sat back and looked at her.

"It Isn't Fair!"

"Yes," he said, mournfully, "yes, of course I apologize. After all, Dolly Wilton and Dotty Hilton are so very near alike—in sound, and Muriel said it over the telephone."

"But we are quite different."

"You would be—this Dolly would be one I couldn't possibly look at twice, and you—Oh, dear." He sighed heavily.

"But, of course, Dorothy said brightly, anxious to cheer him, "we can always be good friends. I will go now."

"Yes, always good friends." He stood up and shook hands. Dorothy crossed to the door.

"Oh, wait a moment—" He stepped over and gently drew her back into the room and closed the door. Bravely he put his fingers under her chin and lifted up her face. "Tell me," he said, gravely, "are you happily married?"

At first Dorothy was startled. Then she smiled at him, not knowing that it was her smiles that reached his heart first.

"Why yes, I am," she assured him.

"Oh dear—but you're not. You can't be. It isn't fair!"

Dorothy regarded him curiously, puzzled.

"Isn't fair?"

"No, it isn't. I have lived forty years and expected the world around and never have I fallen in love until now. It isn't fair that I should fall in love with a married woman—and a happily married one, at that."

With a boldness that surprised him, he put an arm about her and drew her toward the couch.

"Please—Frank," she protested, but it was a wild protestation. Her heart was beating wildly.

"But I cannot see this all as if it meant nothing."

"It doesn't mean anything."

"But it does, Dorothy."

"No—Frank."

"Look here, I can't let you run out of my life."

"But I am not in your life, I am happily married."

"Then," he said, looking at her boldly, "I will be satisfied with half a loaf."

Dorothy gasped, then shook her head.

"No, there isn't even half a loaf."

"Then the—er—crumbs, darling!"

"No crumbs."

"There must be. Look here, when may I come and see you?"

"That's absurd. I told you—"

"I know. I want to see your happy husband and your children."

Why Not!

"Of all the——" Dorothy hesitated. After all, why not? Let him come out and see her happy home. He would realize, then, that he couldn't expect half a loaf, or anything at all.

"Perhaps, if you really cared to come," Dorothy said.

"Cared? I shall care for nothing else except to have a moment with you, Dorothy, even though I have to share that moment with your family."

"Very well, Frank." Dorothy crossed to the desk, got paper and wrote out the address for him. "If your taxi man is muddled, tell him that 56 Beech Tree road is just off St. John's road, they all know that one."

"I'll find it. If I have to try every door in London."

"At eight, then?"

"Any time, Dorothy."

"Five o'clock earlier. That's one hour when my husband expects to be late and this will be his late night."

"Right it is."

"And now I must run."

"Must you? Really, I wish—"

Dorothy was at the door. He picked up his hat and went down with her, holding her arm as though she were a piece of Venetian glassware. The landlady stood in the lower hall, glaring at them and muttering about "Such goings on in my house!"

But she didn't mutter it loud enough to be heard. Harris was paying her double rates because of his ignorance of London prices at that time.

"Just a moment, please," Harris said and dashed into a flower shop. He came out with a great bunch of flowers, called a taxi, helped her in and said, "At eight, my dear."

Then, before Dorothy could protest, he kissed her.

Circus Gadgets

GADGETS, those miscellaneous bits that stamp a costume with individuality, are more engaging than ever this spring. Consider "circus" pins—striped zebras, mischievous monkeys or rangy giraffes—to brighten a quiet lapel. Belts of linked silver medallions are a nice Victorian touch. Harlequin shoes, half navy, half white, are exciting, and there are gloves to match. With cool dark sheers, crownless hats of buttercolor straw and companion hand-

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. Ross
Boston Wing Commander

Come on, Model Builders! Join the parade of beginners who will trek to Franklin Field next Saturday morning and vie for $70 in prizes in the big annual Novice Model Plane Flying Contest for Junior Birdmen.

It's your chance of a lifetime, the chance to capture the main prize of a $25 merchandise order good at the Boys' Shops of Kennedy's store or any one of 31 other awards, ranging from a $10 model supply order at the Bemo Aircraft Co.'s store, 77 Summer street, to a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (well wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

Print name .....

Street address .....

City ..... State .....

My Age Is Now.....(Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

All you have to do is build two models, an all-balsa glider and a rubber-powered, hand-launched stick model, and report before 9 a. m. next Saturday morning at Franklin Field, Blue Hill and Talbot avenues, Dorchester.

At the field you will enter your name with the registrar and be assigned to a timer. From then on it's up to your models. If they fly longer than those of other contestants you'll carry away the chief prize and the chance to outfit yourself for the summer.

Start building your models NOW. You don't have too much time and the more work you do, the better chance you have to win. The models must meet the specifications below.

In addition to the main award to the high point scorer, is the list of attractive runner-up prizes, any one of which should bring the enthusiastic entry of every young model builder.

Second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth place high point scorers will receive model supply orders good at the Bemo Aircraft Company for $10, $7, $5, $3 and $2, respectively; next ten winners will each receive a pair of tickets to see the current program at Loew's State Theater; next six winners will each receive a full set of Junior Birdmen handbooks; next two winners will each receive a winder and next eight winners will each receive a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem.

This makes a total of 33 individual prizes valued at more than $70.

Remember you won't have to compete against experts or the more advanced model builders. This is a contest for beginners only and no boy or girl who has won a fifth to first place in any official Junior Birdmen contest is eligible. An official contest is one conducted by wing headquarters such as the outdoor and indoor wing tournaments, winter indoor meets at South Armory and the novice contests.

Here are the specifications for the models:

GLIDER

(A glider is a non-powered craft, constructed entirely of balsa or other light wood).

A—The area of the main wing must be no less than 36 square inches and no more than 100 square inches. Wings must be constructed entirely of balsa.

B—Tandem or multiple wings are NOT eligible. C—Fuselage must be constructed entirely of balsa, may be hollowed out and can be of any length. D—Tail unit must be built entirely of balsa and may be any size. Tailless gliders are eligible.

E—Model may have weights in front for balancing. F—Landing gear is NOT permitted. G—Model must be hand-launched without the use of any type of catapult (sling, etc.).

STICK MODEL

(A hand-launched stick model is a rubber motor powered craft with fuselage of solid stick construction, having built-up wings and tail unit. It has no landing gear.)

A—Model may be single or double propeller, of the pusher or tractor type. B—Model must be powered with rubber strand motor. C—The area of the main wing must be no less than 100 square inches and no more than 150 square inches. Models with two or more sets of main wings are NOT eligible.

D—Model, without rubber band motor, must weigh one ounce or more for each 55 square inches of wing area. (All models for this event will be "weighed-in" WITHOUT the rubber motor.) Putty, nails, gum or other extreme material are NOT permitted to bring the weight of the model up to these specifications.

E—Wing and tail unit members must be built up and covered with tissue, microfilm or other covering on one or both sides. F—Fuselage must be of solid stick construction. Hollowed out or tubular fuselages are NOT eligible. G—Landing gear is NOT permitted. H—Model, for this event, must be hand-launched.

An interesting exhibit of model planes, made by members of the Shobe Memorial squadron, Everett will be displayed for a week beginning tomorrow at the Watertown East Branch Library.

Among the scale models expected to be entered are a Fokker Triple and a Grumman FF-1 made by Edward Cain; Douglas O-38 and a Beech Bonder, by Jack Bronski; Hawk P-6-E, Fred Hartung; Heath Parasol, David Adelstone; Commander, and a biplane cabin model of special construction by Edward Cain. John Jacobs heads the scale model committee.

Two twin pushers will be supplied by David Adelstone and Marty Philips. Two towline gliders of 48 and 36-inch wing span respectively, and four H. L. gliders are the work of Henry Gerrin and William Days. Jack Bronski will add two cabin fuselage jobs.

This unit recently held a glider contest in a field near the old Malden high school in which Harry Latman took first place with 1 min. 23 sec. William Day's model flew 26 sec., Jack Bronski and Marty Phillips tied with 43 sec., and John Jacobs made 27 sec.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

WHAT more is to be said about the baseball pennant outlook, may be voiced by Joe Di Maggio, the slugger of the New York Yankees, when that young man makes a "mike" appearance with Jimmy Melton for the "Saturday Night Party" highlight this evening (WNAC) between 8 and 9 o'clock.

"N. F. T."

It's all the rage to rush ball players to the radio realm this time of year. Joe is of course being sought by many program planners down New York way Melton also promises to again present Jane Pickens, the pretty songstress, this being a return to the setting by Jane who one of the original air cast members previous to joining the "Ziegfeld Follies" lineup.

ROGERS ROUNDUP

Appealing is the advance word about the "Will Rogers Memorial Fund" feature (WEEI) arranged for tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. It will mark the dedication and launching of the Rogers Memorial Fund Drive and includes a galaxy of broadcasting highlights. Fred Waring will be the master of ceremonies, with Dick Powell, The Revelers Quartet, Jessica Dragonette, Jack "Baron Munchausen" Pearl, Leslie Howard, Lanny Ross and many others ready and waiting to take part.

* * *

Gene Sarazen, one of the greatest golfers ever to swing a stick, joins Joe Cook this evening (WNAC) at 9:30 for one of those clever Cook comedy interviews that blend sense and nonsense so splendidly to make for top-notch dial diversion.

* * *

Funniest of the bits heard this week was the one by Bob Burns with Bing Crosby on Thursday night. Bob said he had an Aunt so ugly that when he sent her photo to Ripley, the latter wouldn't believe it!

* * *

Nice demand is developing for the singing services of Niela Goodelle. Her warbling is wafted while Ed Wynn holds forth (WBZ) this evening at 8 o'clock and once more during the "Rippling Rhythm" session with Shep Fields orchestra (WBZ) tomorrow night between 9 and 9:30 o'clock.

DEMOCRATIC DINNER

The Grover Cleveland Democratic Club will honor Hon. Jeremiah T. Mahoney, former Supreme Court justice and president of the Amateur Athletic Union, at a testimonial dinner tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

Addresses at the above dinner will be broadcast (WMEX) from 10:15 to 10:45 p. m. Postmaster-General James A. Farley, James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, and Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York will be the principal speakers. Hon. James W. Gerard, former United States ambassador to Germany, will preside.

* * *

Songs, lusty and sentimental by Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan Opera baritone, and novel piano improvisations and vocal impressions by Alec Templeton, blind English pianist, will be highlights in the second of the "Universal Rhythm" impressions (WEEI) this evening at 7:30 p.m. Additional musical variety will be presented by the Landt Trio and Rex Chandler's orchestra.

* * *

Ninety-five outstanding college instrumentalists, occupying chairs in the Ohio Intercollegiate Orchestra, are taking the air in concert when the National Broadcasting Company presents the finals of the Fourth Annual Festival of the Ohio Intercollegiate Orchestra Association tonight (WEEI) from 10:30 to 11:00 p. m.

The auditorium of Baldwin Wallace Music Conservatory, in Berea, Ohio, will be the scene of the concert. Guy Fraser Harrison, noted director of the Rochester Civic Orchestra, heard frequently over NBC networks, will be guest conductor.

* * *

Among the Hub songstresses likely to have recognition aplenty in the radio realm before long, is Carmen Trudeau, currently heard (WMEX) larking with the Frank Ward music makers at the Penthouse of Tommy Maren, atop the Hotel Bradford.

Tune Slowly for Europe

BOSTON after DARK

(There is a slight revision comes out of Holland Hall at St. Elizabeth's last night, and it reads like this:

"Dear Stooges: Will you please announce to my public that I bobbled a bit on that May date and the good Doc. Norton tells me I cannot be Queen of the May come what may (the Doc. is full of puns like that). Tell them, however, that on June 17th I'll ride a camel over the great Charlestown Sahara, starting from Mother Galvin's pub. George."

Well . . .))

GEORGE HOLLAND

Accent on Street:

Suffolk County Court Officer Redmond (Red) Fitzgerald, the ex-senator, was stopped near his home in Dorchester by a lad with an accent not French . . . Could Fitz tell him the location of O'Kelly street, the stranger would like to know . . . Well, Fitz thought he knew all the streets in the area but O'Kelly st. stumped him . . . But a cop came along and he, too, had an accent not French . . . "O'Kelly," croons the bluecoat. "O'Kelly is it? You wouldn't be meanin' Oakley st.?" . . . As easy as that . . .

Col. Egan on the Hoof:

Dave Egan, the ex-scrivener here in sports and No. 3 man on the relay team, forwards word that Agawam is going into the real wampum this year or he'll bust a leg and move in with the Holland . . . The colonel, publicity purveyor there and at the fast-moving Valley Arena (Holyoke) says already there are more than 400 applications for stall space and he's had to give up his own box stall . . . Last year there were none at this time, and on opening day only 68 nags were present . . . One hoss galloped every day for the first 14 days of racing . . . Eddie Brennan is gen'l mgr. this year, Thaddeus (Ty) Shea is race sec. and Dan Gurnett is treas. . . . 200 G's ready for purses . . .

Once Over Lightly:

Beautiful Helen Carrol, dancer, who lost a leg in that too-tragic Dec. auto crash, doesn't know it yet, but a novel is being dedicated to her . . . It's by Mabel Hyslop, the Jamaica Plain girl who was with her in the accident . . . Mabel has lost the sight of one eye as a result . . . The other will go eventually . . . But her heartache is all for Helen . . . Woman ! ! ! . . . Her first novel was published in 1933 . . .

U. S. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford has ironed out that jam between U. S. Comish. Guterman and Asst. U. S. Atty. McCarthy . . . The Fin. Com. really wants to spotlight profits of the Codman Hill Construction Co. in that White Fund probe . . . And if anybody tells you the ex-guide of a prominent Hub office holder is the real construction co. owner—well, it isn't polite to contradict . . .

Who was the lass who slaves on the City Hall Annex 11th floor and who hopped into the bathtub fully dressed when a mousie arrived? . . . The water was running and she was just starting to peel . . . Those lads you see wearing Am. beauty roses have been to Holland Hall . . . Gertrude Niesen wired them from Detroit . . . She opens Wednesday at the Mayfair . . .

Maybe you've forgotten, but Barbara Belmore, current RKO-Boston fan swisher, is the gal who sued that showshop five months ago for allegedly displaying her thin-clad photo with a chorine tag . . . Barb, then was at Cocoanut Grove . . . Her present contract understood to carry a clause calling off litigation . . .

Selznick sharps announce the world's perfect fashion model as a 20-year-old brunette, 116 lbs. 5 ft. 8 in. tall, wearing a size 6 slipper . . . Slipper? . . . It's a composite miss from statistics on the 12 most photographed girls in the universe . . . Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians in Hollywood to play in "Varsity Show" for Warner Bros. . . . Nineteen different uniforms of British regiments in 1810 are accurately presented in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co.'s performance of "Ruddigore" . . .

John T. Benson, America's No. 1 wild animal man, advises from his Nashua animal farm that the circus recently announced as sold was the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus . . . The real Carl Hagenbeck Circus, which Benson represents in America, still going strong and in Buenos Aires . . . U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy has invented a new cell . . . Made of pipes, which carry water, the cell door gives its own alarm when opened unofficially, the water loosing an automatic spring . . . Stanley Paul, scrivener, please call Stanley Paul, promoter, at Boston Garden today . . .

Promotions in M. & P. Theater organization through acquiring many Greater Boston houses . . . George Moffitt, ex-asst. to Mgr. John Carroll at the Paramount, goes in as mgr. at East Milton's State . . . Bunch of rookie cops trailed for the physicals by Eddie Kohler at Columbia rd. gym, write in an accolade for teacher . . . Nat Pendleton, the ex-rassler, will have a comedy role in "Gangway," starring the British femme ace, Jessie Matthews, at Gaumont-British . . .

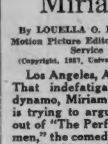
Warner Role Displeases Miriam

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1937, Universal Service)

Los Angeles, April 24—That indefatigable little dynamo, Miriam Hopkins, is trying to argue herself out of "The Perfect Specimen," the comedy by Samuel Hopkins Adams, author of "It Happened One Night."

Miriam, vacationing up at Pebble Beach, has sent word that she does not think the part is right for her. But when she gets back to town on Monday and hears the tears over her performances in "Woman Chasers Man," she'll probably change her mind and about making another comedy.



Louella O. Parsons

It is important that Miriam make a decision on the Warner movie in which she is co-starred with Errol Flynn, for all her future plans depend on it. RKO, you see, is having Dudley Nichols script "She Married for Money," another rollicking comedy by Thames Williamson, and then there is that trip to Europe, both planned to follow her Warner engagement, if she keeps it.

Stopped in at a cafe for a cup of tea after the "Hollywood Hotel" rehearsal Thursday night and found Eddie Cantor holding forth enthusiastically about Charlie Winninger's performance in "The Go-Getter."

"He's a regular male Marie Dressler," said Eddie, "and this is going to open a new career for him."

In answer to our query on the Cantor movie career, Eddie told us his new picture would be "Ali Baba Goes to Town" and he's letting Darryl Zanuck do all the boasting on story, director and cast. I call that smart for in the past Eddie's worried himself sick over running his own shows.

In the silent days when red haired Hope Hampton played in flickers that weren't so good, she didn't have her trained singing voice nor her mature experience with grand opera. She was just a pretty girl with a movie ambition. Now she will have another try at the Elms as soon as Universal finds a story for her.

Married to Millionaire Jules Brulatour, Miss Hampton has had every opportunity for travel and study advantages — and there is a feeling at Universal that with a suitable operetta or musical comedy she might really do something on the screen.

Muni, Hopkins Star In Stirring Film

By PEGGY DOYLE

Academy Award-Winner Paul Muni who drifted in "The Good Earth," is the faithful husband in RKO-Radio's "The Woman I Love," and it is his cinema wife, the blonde and beauteous Miriam Hopkins, who finds love outside of matrimony.

In this film transcription of Joseph Kessel's best - selling "L'Equipage," Louis Hayward, as Muni's best friend and the man Miss Hopkins loves, not only shares starring honors with these two celluloid toppnichers on the Keith - Memorial screen, where the picture is currently unreeling, he walks off with the picture—that is, he and the airplane warfare sequences do.

Oh yes, we have the good old war with us again, for Muni and Hayward wear the uniforms of the Escadrille 37, flying unit in which the former is the latter's ranking officer.

Muni, wearing some rather uncombed chin-whiskers and an unhappy look in his dark eyes, is the famous unit's No. 1 Brooder. Because he is the pilot who never brings 'em back alive, the other men believe he is a jinx. They will not go up with him as observers and gunners.

Shortly after he joins the outfit, Hayward, sensing the man's misery, talks with him, learns that the one thing he loves is his beautiful wife. He in turn reveals that he loves a woman he met only a few, brief hours before he left for the front. They become friends, unaware that Muni's Helen and Hayward's Denise are one and the same woman.

Hayward discovers Denise's deception when he goes to Paris on leave and, among the many errands he has promised to do for his comrades, delivers Muni's letter to his wife. Hayward's loyalty to the man he loves more than a brother revolts at the wife's perfidy. Upon his return to his company, Muni questions him eagerly about his adored wife, is rebuffed by Hayward. When Muni's best friend and the man Miss Hopkins loves, not only shares starring honors with these two celluloid topnichers on the Keith - Memorial screen, where the picture is currently unreeling, he walks off with the picture—that is, he and the airplane warfare sequences do.

LEFTY GROVE HURLS FOR SOX AGAINST YANKEES

McCarthy Nominates Monte Pearson to Upset Locals

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1937 11

MR. BOSTON

Grove, Ferrell Red Sox Key Men | Dave Wilson Here Next Week

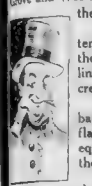
By JACK CONWAY

I BELIEVE the 1937 baseball hopes of the Red Sox depend more upon the pitching ability of "Lefty" Grove and Wes Ferrell than on any other two men on the ball club.



Mr. Boston

Rogers Hornsby has always contended that pitching was 80 per cent of the success of any ball club. Eddie Collins gives the flingers 60 per cent of the credit for the work of a winning team.

Grove and Ferrell are veterans of the baseball wars. Each has at times shown flashes of pitching greatness. If they can equal their best pitching feats this year, there is hope that the Sox will go places.

When Grove first joined the Sox from the Athletics, he was one of the leading grouches in the national pastime. The fact Lefty's" arm gave him considerable pain didn't add to his good humor.

It was the first time during his baseball career that he had been bothered by a lame wing, and he lacked the necessary patience under the trying condition.

One n I never rate Grove with the social leaders of baseball this year I am told the port side flinger has even gone along way to hold conversations with strangers. He anticipates a good pitching year, and this thought has helped him greatly.

I DO not look for Grove to develop into an entertaining after-dinner speaker, but he will at least give he newsmen pleasant salutes when they ask him what kind of a ball he is going to pitch to Joe DiMaggio or Lou Gehrig.

• • •

FERRELL COOLS TEMPERAMENT

WES FERRELL has been acting his age since the training season started. He is leaving the glove throwing stunt for the small boys on the local playgrounds.

He got off to a flying start when he won his first game of season against the Athletics. He will make a strong bid to win 20 games this year.

I have always considered Wes a great competitive athlete. His intense desire for victory that has at times caused him to lose his temper and do things which he probably later regretted.

If Ferrell were a golfer instead of a baseball pitcher, he would probably toss his club into a water hole if he dubbed his tee shot.

If Grove and Ferrell get some pitching support from the remaining members of the staff, they should be able to keep the club in the first division. The Sox possess plenty of batting punch to shoot get their share of runs.

Joe Cronin is worrying more about the runs the opposition may get rather than what his own club gets. Good pitching will dominate Joe's chief worry

If every other man will only behave we shall be able to get a good race on the Sox as they battle the Yankees.

RACING AROUND CORNER

WITH MORE than 500 horses already eating their oats at Narragansett Park, one realizes the New England racing season is only around the corner. On next Saturday the season will get under way at the Pawtucket, R. I., track.

Racing Secretary Pat Hogan informs me there will be more than 1200 horses at Narragansett Park when the bugle sounds for the first race.

The class horses of the country will be on hand to give the New England racing season a proper start.

I have been following Dave Wilson's selections from the time he started here a good line on many of the horses which will race at Narragansett Park.

Dave will start for New England next week, and will be in the press box at Narragansett Park when the entries for the opening day are released next Friday. King Dave will then wire his handicap for the first day of racing to this newspaper.

You will also be interested in a new betting offer Walter O'Hara makes to Ann Marsters, feature writer of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. O'Hara will outline his plan in a letter which will be published in the sports section of tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

RANDOM SHOTS AT TARGET

WITH $1400 in prizes, the Ard Righ Horse show at the Cattle Estate in Dover on May 15 should draw a large entry list. Allan Wilson is chairman of the horse show committee . . . Entry blanks for the opening game at Fenway Park yesterday were in demand when rain prevented the game. They received a number of requests for their tickets, but in some cases could not get the applications in time for today's game in view of the fact the Saturday games have been on sale for several days. There has also been a big advance sale of tickets for the Sunday game . . .

George (Dazzler) Clark, Alex MacLean tells me, is in good condition and confident of winning over Steve Casey of Ireland in their finish mat bout at the Garden on next Friday night. . . . He intends to remain in this country until next Fall and is working toward a title bout with Yvon Robert. The latter will return to the wrestling wars next month following a long layoff which was caused by a broken leg.

Max Kase, baseball editor of the New York Journal, is in with the Yankees, and keeps the players stepping with his assortment of hot foot applications and other jokes. Max considers it all in playful fun to set off a cannon cracker under the seat of a ball player or newspaper scribe. Max was formerly associated with the sports staff of this newspaper, and is not a baseball writer.

GOVERNOR LAUNCHES A.L. SEASON HERE

State and city officials were on hand to help open the American League season at Fenway Park. It was the world champion New York Yankees opposing our own Boston Red Sox. Here's Mayor Mansfield, Lieutenant-Governor Kelley, Tom Yawkey, and Governor Hurley in the back, reading left to right. The rival managers, Joe Cronin of the Hose and Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees are in front.

Plenty of action right at the start of the Red Sox-Yankees opener at Jersey street grounds. An alert cameraman caught Jake Powell of the Yanks being thrown out at first on a play from Bobby Doerr to Mel Almada.

POLITICIANS PACK FENWAY OPENER

LEFTY GROVE'S FIRE BALL HOT

By JACK CONWAY

Fenway Park, April 24 — Bleacher fans, basking in a warm sun, were able to give the laugh to the grandstand customers who were chilled by a cold breeze.

Jimmy Dawson of the New York Times, perched in the press box declared the weather was ideal for a football game between the Army and Notre Dame. He then called for a pair of blankets

Lou Gehrig, nursing a sore finger on his left hand, watched infield practice from the bench, while Babe Dahlgren held down the initial sack during the preliminary drills. Lou, of course later got into the ball game as he continued his "iron man" stunt.

Mrs. Robert Moses Grove, wife of "Lefty," arrived in Boston this morning and watched the game in the company of Mrs. Herb Pennock from a box near the Red Sox bench.

Wally Berger also held down a seat in a box near the Sox bench The Bees home run hitter—and now they miss him—is still nursing a finger which he broke in the opening game of the season against the Phillies. Mrs. Berger was at the game with her husband

Max Kase of the New York Journal sports staff arrived in the press box weighed down by a sweater and a Winter overcoat. e insisted upon talking to Bill Grimes about Florida sunshine.

Jimmy Coughlin's 101st. Infantry band furnished the music. Jimmy has been on the job at baseball openings in Boston since championship days which are a bit in the ancient history period.

Tom Henrich, who was declared a free agent by Judge Landis and who received a $20,000 bonus for signing with the Yankees, worked out with his club. He is a raw looking youngster, and judging from his actions is liable to crash into the world's champions' lineup in the near future.

Vernon "Goofy" Gomes pitched to the Yankees during batting practice. He wore a pair of Red Sox stockings. Joe Cronin would like to give him a full uniform and a contract, but, of course, there isn't a chance of the star left-hander getting away from Joe McCarthy's team.

Jimmy Foxx wired Eddie Collins he will be on hand for Sunday. It is unlikely that Jimmy will get into the lineup until the middle of next week

Wm Green, Bruins' trainer, who went to Philadelphia with the Red Sox as a pinch hitter for Joe Logan, made a favorable impression with the players

Eddie Collins was in the rear of the grandstands before the game greeting the fans

"Lefty" Grove then started warming up for the Sox, and told Joe Cronin his pitching arm felt okay.

For the first time in 20 years Joe Geary missed a Red Sox opening. Last Tuesday Joe underwent another operation, and is making a rapid recovery at the Charlestown Hospital where he listened in to Fred Hoey's radio account of today's game.

Governor Charles F. Hurley was given a cordial greeting by the fans when he walked to his box seat on the arm of General Manager Eddie Collins.

BOBBY DOERR MAKES 1ST FUMBLE

Monte Pearson began warming up for the Yankees.

A marine corps detail of 17 men marched behind the band to center field for the flag raising

Lieutenant-Governor Joseph Kelly occupied a seat in Governor Hurley's box.

Lou Gehrig walked over to Governor Hurley's box and shook hands with the state's chief executive

The crowd cheered merrily as Lefty Grove took the mound. His first pitch to Crosetti was a called strike which was cause for more merriment.

Brighton Civics To Meet Hoyt Pals

Brighton fans will get their first glimpse of the Eastern Civics baseball nine in action when they meet the Hoyt Pals of Cambridge at Rogers Park.

The Civics are entered in the Boston Park Department loop this season, whose the manager of team is a member of the Suburban League.

Jim Timmons and Paul Toomey are expected to form the Civics battery with Dave Barry the probable mound choice for the Pals.

MANERO Coming From SALEM

DENNY SHUTE WITH HIM

The list of celebrities continues to grow.

The by-word has become "See you at the Night Pink Final dinner at the Club Mayfair a week from Tuesday night."

Famed athletes, entertainers and leaders in business, political and professional life will attend.

Latest additions from the world of sport are Denny Shute and Tony Manero. Both are internationally prominent for their achievements on title links.

Best Seller

Manero is National Open champion. Shute is P. G. A. title holder and former British Open champion. In addition to these titles, both have a list of minor championships long as a handicapper's string excuses when his best bet runs out of the money.

Shute is now the pro at Brae Burn while Manero is at the Salem Country Club.

These two golfers represent the best in this field, and the leaders of all other fields of endeavor will be present to pay tribute to the Boston Evening American's Night Pink Final.

Tradition has it that folks remain true to established newspapers habits, yet the Night Pink Final, which is only a year old, is the best selling late sports edition in New England.

Its purpose is to give sports fans today's news today.

Complete News

Play by play descriptions are given of the Bees and Red Sox games, complete racing information through late afternoon is available, plus charts at the track from where Dave Wilson sends his graded handicaps.

The Night Pink Final also has Wilson's graded handicaps and comments for the following day as well as entries and special selections.

Then all the golf, tennis, track and other sports news always find their way into the Night Pink Final.

It's just one year old, and the big birthday party at the Club Mayfair will be a stand-take-in.

Merry Maker Out of 'Graw' Feature

Due to a slight leg injury, Mrs. Myrtle Shea's Merry Maker was scratched for the $10,000 Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace today. The colt won his race impressively last week, but in doing so he rapped his right front leg, causing a wind puff.

The injury is not considered serious but because Trainer Willie Shea wants to start his charge in the Kentucky Derby, he decided not to risk permanent injury by running him today. If Merry Maker responds to treatment he will receive his final Derby prep in the $20,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica next Saturday.

Two colts from Alfred G. Vanderbilt's stable, which defeated John Whitney's Inhale, winner of the Youthful Stakes at Jamaica, will carry the cerise and white colors of the young Maryland sportsman in the coming Aberdeen Stakes at Havre de Grace. They are Jack Re Nimble and Indian Lodge. Both finished ahead of Inhale on the West Coast last winter.

Form players are enjoying unusual success at Jamaica, where the attendance for the first seven days showed approximately 25 per cent increase over last year. Out of the 42 races run during that period, 17 favorites saluted the judges for an average of .38 per cent.

To accommodate the large crowds expected for the Woods Memorial next Saturday, new bleachers, seating 5000, are being erected at the head of the stretch.

Sabin Southern Net Champion

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 24. (INS)—Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Cal., today won the Mason and Dixon tennis championship with a 12-10, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Gilbert Hall, of New York.

After putting up a brilliant and stubborn battle in that long-drawn out opening set, Hall apparently want to pieces in the next two and never had a chance against the steady coast youngster.

In adding his name to the Green brier trophy beside those of Tilden, Vines, Richards and other great players, Sabin staged a brilliant exhibition of skill.

Greenberg Proves Experts Wrong

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—Big Hank Greenberg hasn't any quarrel with the "experts" who once said he was through, but if he can't make them eat their words this season he hopes they'll at least have to nibble on them.

The 6 foot, 3-inch Detroit Tiger first baseman, forced out of the game early last season with a wrist fracture, feels he is due for another season of his 1935 variety when he hammered out 36 homers batted 328 and was named the most valuable player in the American League.

"There were plenty of reports last summer that I'd never fully recover from that injury," he said today as the Tigers faced the Chicago White Sox again. "But the fans who took them seriously were too pessimistic. While I admit the wrist was in bad shape, I never had the slightest doubt but that I'd get back in shape eventually.

"I like baseball too well to be kept out of it for good, and I think I'll get going again this year. I felt great in Spring camp and the wrist feels as strong as ever. I've got just as much whip in my swing as I ever had and being just 26, I know I have plenty of good years ahead of me."

Greenberg weighs 210 pounds and appears to be in great condition. In yesterday's 10 to 2 Tiger victory over the Sox his first hit, a screaming single through short, almost took a leg off Manager Mickey Cochrane, who was heading for third base.

His second hit was a double, slashed down the left field line. In the ninth he caught one off Johnny Whitehead's fast balls and dropped it far up in the left field stands.

Hank hurt his wrist sliding into home plate in the second game of the 1935 World Series and saw no more action in that championship duel, won by the Tigers.

On April 28 of last season he collided with Jake Powell, then of the Washington Senators, and the resultant wrist fracture ended his activity for the year.

Months of treatment followed and when he reported to the Bengal camp this spring he was working for a job, not having a definite contract understanding with the Tigers' management. His training season showing soon won him a full year contract.

Amateur Ice Star Killed in Crash

Hamilton, Ont., April 24 (AP)—Steve Conick, member of Sudbury Tigers, Dominion Senior Amateur Hockey champions, was killed early today in an automobile accident.

Conick was riding in an open touring car which turned over following a collision, crushing the young hockey player beneath it.

Wrestling Results

Buffalo, N. Y.—Danno O'Mahoney, 238, Ireland, threw Frank Judson, 215, Brooklyn, 34:40 (Second heat ended by time limit).

Philadelphia—Steve Casey, 230, Ireland, threw Cliff Olsen, 215, Beaudette, Minn., 34:28.

BATTLE Over Young JOB OFFER

Montreal, April 24 (INS)—Mayor J. Adhemar Raynault's offer of a job on the Montreal police force for Walter Young, Verdun winner of the Boston Marathon this week, today precipitated a battle between this city and the suburban municipality of Verdun.

"I would thank the mayor of Montreal if he would mind his own business," declared Verdun's doughty Mayor Herve Forland. "He never thought of offering Young a job before winning the Boston classic."

The City Council of Verdun, he added, has sanctioned his proposal to create a position of sports commissioner for Verdun and offer the post to the famous, but jobless, winner of the grind.

"The position provides for more salary than any police force can offer," he concluded triumphantly. "It was our intention to surprise him with the offer, but he might as well know about it now."

It was the City Council of Verdun that provided the major portion of Young's training expenses prior to the Boston grind.

College Yachtsmen Race in Basin

Tech, Harvard, Cornell, Williams, Yale and other college yachtsmen will decide the college sailing championships today in the I. C. R. A. meet to be held on the Charles Basin under the auspices of the Technology Nautical Association.

Tech, winner over Navy last week-end, is runner up as favorite to Cornell.

Yale also will send out a crew of four sailors who are expected to show strongly in the races, over the windward and leeward courses.

Dodgers Cut

Philadelphia, April 24 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers' pitching staff was reduced to 11 today when Manager Burleigh Grimes released Wally Signer, right-handed hurler, on option to Louisville of the American Association. Watson Clark, one of the 11, son may be converted into a coach.

Helen Stephens Wins Three Events

St. Louis, April 24 (AP)—Helen Stephens, Fulton, Mo., track queen, gained more laurels by establishing a new indoor shot-put record and winning two races in the Women's National A. A. U. indoor track meet here last night.

Miss Stephens hurled the shot 44 feet 11¼ inches to better the mark of 41 feet 11 inches which she set last year.

The Missouri sprinter was forced to show her speed in the 50-yard dash to beat Claire Isicson, New York, by one step. The time was :06.5, one-tenth of a second slower than the National Women's record which she set here in 1936.

Selections for fast track

BEST BET—DASHING DOE, 3RD RACE

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 24—Dashing Doe, a Distraction-Portage filly that races for John F. Hughes, looms all powerful in the six furlongs of the third race here Monday.

Frank Garrett's charge cut out a dazzling early pace in her last race only to give way in the stretch run to the Bomar Stable's highly regarded Derby eligible Siam, Gray Grand, Play, another Kentucky Derby eligible, and others finished in back of her that day.

On performance, Dashing Doe figures to lead home the Brandywine Stable entry (Turkey Run and Broadkill) and E. R. Bradley's Black Widow in the order named The race is patterned for maidens and winners of one race

FIRST—Peppery, Wandrel, Jobakheta

PEPPERY, a five-year-old Claptrap mare, came out of winter retirement to finish a bang-up second to WANDREL in a 13 pound weight shift in her favor, should easily reverse the tables on WANDREL. WANDREL, a mare seasoned by active competition drubbed the top section a length and one-half in the above mentioned race. JOBAKHETA hard, classes with the top pair

SECOND—Battlejack, Jolly Jack, Grape Thief

BATTLEJACK was beaten only one length by Rehearsal in the swiftest four furlongs of the meeting only a few days back. That performance was the maiden's first try in active competition JOLLY JACK has worked in GRAPE THIEF has never faced the barrier, but clockers say the John Hay Whitney colorbearer is a real runner.

THIRD—Dashing Doe, Brandy Wine Entry, Black Widow

DASHING DOES early speed gives her the edge on performance TURKEY RUN shapes up more formidable than his stable mate BROAD KILL, the former showed excellent early speed in shifty company the other day, only to tire badly in the late stages as if dead short. BROAD KILL is a maiden, but a mighty capable one BLACK WIDOW, on Florida form, shapes up well in the fight for the remainder of the spoils

FOURTH—Regal Lilly, Carefor, My Elsie

REGAL LILLY, away from the races since her sterling fourth in the rich Pelham Stakes at Laurel, needs only to duplicate brilliant morning trials to lead this ordinary field of fillies past the imaginary wire

FIFTH—Mrs. R. H. Heighe Entry, Silent Shot, Her Reigh.

Mrs. R. H. Heighe will hold an all powerful hand in this number if trainer John Bonifico elects to send the Belair, Md., sports woman's BROWN TWIG and ZAY postward. Of the two I rather fancy the chances of Brown Twig. The later finished second to Bootless in his last race and was a winner of a subsequent endeavor. Zay has been ide since Florida racing, but on performance she figures to be there or thereabouts at the finish. SILENT SHOT, which was beaten three full lengths by the top selection in his last outing, shapes up slightly better than HER REIGH. The latter was a dead short colt in his last outing

SIXTH—Bold General, Torquil, Molasses Bob

Shooting for a price and expect to get same if Mrs. E. Denemark's HOLD GENERAL escapes early interferences. The latter showed to advantage while receiving lightweights in a swiftly run sprint race the other day. Florida form indicates the route will be right to measure TORQUIL and MOLASSES BOB figure pretty much alike at their last race. I'm going to tempt fate by rating them as named

SEVENTH—Zembla, Naval Cadet, Jim John

ZEMBLA, winner of two straight races, should experience little difficulty in chalking up her third straight win. The opposition is little more than she has already drubbed. NAVAL CADET was heavily backed to down the top selection, but could never threaten at any stage of that journey. May do better here. JIM JOHN, if not too sore, may prove a difficult plater to catch. He pulled up very dinky in his last race

'SIT-DOWN' Fad Hits LINKS

The sit down fad has reached the confines of the golf clubs

And, with it has come striking caddies demanding higher wages and a better deal all around.

Some 135 bag toters went out on strike this forenoon at the South Shore Country Club, West Hingham, while 100 were striking at the Wollaston Golf Links.

South Shore's strike came as the club members were on hand preparing a weekly golf tourney. Out of the group of 140 caddies at South Shore 135 joined the strike breakers

The youngsters are demanding an increase of ten per cent a round and a change in the rules that forbids a caddy from leaving the grounds until 6 p. m.

A group of the club members conferred with the strikers at South Shore and it was decided that the boys would go back to work today and tomorrow and that on Monday a committee of five caddies will confer with club officials for settlement

One stipulation before the lads returned to toting golf bags was that the five strike breakers would be discharged. This was met by caddy master Arthur Davey

No settlement as yet has been reached at Wollaston where the lads are stiff on strike

McLaughry Captures Hammer

Harvard Stadium, April 24 — John McLaughry, strapping son of Brown University's football coach, stole the thunder from more highly publicized performers in the first running of the New England Relay carnival here today.

With one herculean effort which surpassed the best distance ever before achieved by a Brown athlete McLaughry, who is a freshman at the school, sent the iron hammer hurtling through the air for a distance of 152 ft. 11 and ¾ inches.

Previous to McLaughry's toss no Brunn had ever negotiated better than 149 feet and 8 inches. The mark also surpassed today's earlier record of Harvard's Bill Shallow by more than 5 feet.

Sharing the spotlight with McLaughry was B. C.'s Bill Gilligan. Winning the discus event with a heave of 129 feet 8½ inches, the versatile Eagle hopped right into the shot put event to gain third place with a throw of 44 feet 5¼ inches.

Dimmi Zaitz, B. C.'s intercollegiate champion, after trailing in the trials of the shot put event tossed the heavy ball an even 50 feet when he was allowed to take his final tries as a special favor.

Zaitz in his first tosses, couldn't negotiate the ball beyond 46 feet and was trailing Brown's Ben Horowitz by over a foot in the trials.

Larry Scanlon, great Holy Cross sprinter, showed the class of the dash field as he catapulted up the straightaway in 11 seconds to win his heat handily.

TIGER Wins Hammer AT PENN

Philadelphia, April 24 (AP)—North Texas Teachers College's crack sprinters, after finishing first in record-smashing time in the final of the 880 yard relay championship race today, were disqualified for violating the baton-passing rules. This heart-breaking setback for the Texans automatically gave first place to Indiana in the opening feature race on the last half of the Pennsylvania carnival program.

North Texas, winner of the 440-yard relay yesterday with the same quartet, spilled its second title bid because Elmer Berry, anchor man for Johnny Stovall, the first and third runners, passed the baton to teammates outside the prescribed zone.

The miscues were obvious from the stands and officials did not hesitate to rule out the Texas boys after they had finished home five yards in front of Indiana in 1 minute 26.3 seconds.

This time was three-fifths under the meet mark, set by the University of Texas last spring. Indiana, automatically moved to first pace and thereby gaining its second relay triumph of the current carnival in somewhat hollow fashion, was clocked in 1:27.2.

With Rhode Island's Bill Howe scratched, the hammer throw rallied to produce anything outstanding. It was won by Bill Lynch, Princeton, at only 151 feet, 4¼ inches, approximately 23 feet short of the carnival record set by Bowdoin's Fred Tootell in 1923.

Five qualifiers in the javelin throw were paced by Ohio Buckeyson, University of Maryland's football hero and all-around athletic star. Buckeyson achieved 203 feet, 8¼ inches.

TEACHERSCOLLEGE MILE RELAY (CHAMPIONSHIP FINAL)
Won by Western Michigan (Bryant, Wiles, Chappell, Ford) second, Westchester (Pa.); third Bloomburg (Pa.) fourth, Mansfield (Pa.) fifth, St. Paul (Charlottesville, Va.) sixth Michigan Normal. Time—3 23 (new carnival record) (former mark of 3 23.3 set by Western Michigan Teachers in 1930.)

Javelin Throw (Final)—Won by Ko Sato (Penn. Athl.) 213 ft. 11 in.; second, Buckeyson, Maryland, 203 ft. 8¼ in.; third, tie between John Kovanda (Penn. Athl.) and Irwin Fisz, Navy 197 ft 4¾ in.; fifth Edward Hooper, Cornell 196 ft. 3 in.

FOUR-MILE COLLEGE RELAY CHAMPIONSHIP
Won by Indiana (Truitt, Smith, Burns and Lash) second, Cornell; third, Pennsylvania; fourth, Manhattan; fifth, Army sixth, Yale. Time—17 16.4 (new world's record; former record 17 17.2 set by Cunningham, Venske and Kovac, Notre Dame) tested at the British Empire games in London, August 15, 1936

Cincinnati, April 24 (AP)—The Cincinnati Baseball Club was advised today by President Ford Frick of the National League that Leo Grissom, Reds' hurler, had been fined $25 for his part in a fist-fight with Catcher Al Todd of the Pittsburgh Pirates during a game in the Smoky City Friday.

Agawam Reduces Ticket Prices

Springfield, April 23—While other race tracks throughout New England are raising the service charges on complimentary tickets and causing great groans among their clients, Agawam Park today made a highly popular move when it was announced that admission to the clubhouse would be reduced to $1.50 and admission to the grandstand to 25 cents.

Since racing was first brought to New England some years back, the prices of admission have been so high that Mr. and Mrs. Joe Horseplayer scurried around in search of complimentary passes, whereupon the cold-hearted moguls of racing countered with fancy service charges.

The service charges at Agawam this season will be almost the same as a year ago. For entrance to the clubhouse, on what the hoys term a Chinese ducat, the service charge will be 50 cents, the same as a year ago, and for entrance to the grandstand the service charge and tax will be 30 cents, which seems to be a fair arrangement at any man's race track.

Ty Cobb Reaches Golf Semi-Finals

Del Monte, Cal., April 24 (AP)—Ty Cobb, swinging a golf club with the same deadly accuracy that he swung a bat for Detroit, was in the semi-finals of the California Indians golf tournament today after defeating Louis Ghirardelli, San Francisco, four and three.

Jones Plans To Live Here

Westfield, April 24—Bobby Jones, former golf king, may take up a residence in this city during the summer months, it was revealed here.

Jones and his family have inspected several homes here during the past week.

The famed golfer-lawyer expects to be engaged as the Chicopee plant of A. G. Spalding and brothers, for whom he is employed as director on production of golf equipment.

Girl Shuns Net; Slip Is Death

Just one more performance, this evening, remains for local thrill addicts to take in thea ce show of the season, that of Lucky Teter and his Hell Divers at the Boston Garden.

This troupe of daredevils, who laugh at death every moment, are headed by the famed Lucky Teter.

Teter has the patrons shivering in their seats with the way he maneuvers those stock auto cars in various acts.

25,000 Attend

Then there is Galen Gough, known professionally as Five Ton Tarzan, who lets a five-ton truck pass over his chest.

Gough has an interesting background. Highnotes of his career include the time he was sparring partner for Max Schmeling, his post as health editor of the old New York Graphic, and his feats as a member of the wrestling fraternity.

One can't overlook petite Leslie Kimris, the French miss, who has the fans gasping when she performs her aerial act, high above the Garden arena, without the benefit of a safety net. One misstep would cause instant death for Miss Kimris or her partner.

Some 25,000 have turned out for the first three performances, the first time this show has been performed indoors. According to Stanley Paul, local representative of the Teter troupe, the show should gross 15,000 more at the conclusion of the last performance.

Daredevil

If you want your thrills dished out to you for three hours, you better not miss the interesting performance by that master showman, Lucky Teter, and his Hell Drivers.

Teter does things with automobiles that the ordinary man can hardly imagine.

He is a show in himself, and he dishes out more thrills and chills than any other performer of his type in the country.

You better drop down to the Boston Garden and see this gathering of Hell Drivers, headed by Lucky Teter. It will be worth your while.

PINKY Higgins ONCE Grid Star

Pinky Higgins, Red Sox third baseman, acquired from Philadelphia, was a first class football star before he embarked upon a baseball career.

At Oak Cliff High school, Texas, Pinky was an all-round athlete. Because of his athletic ability, authorities from the University of Texas offered him an academic course at that institution.

While there, Pinky was an outstanding football player. In 1926, his sophomore year, he won a varsity position. Higgins loves to recall that autumn day in 1928 when Texas was opposed by a strong Vanderbilt University eleven.

That afternoon Pinky snared a 35-yard pass and ran 30 more yards, with the whole Vanderbilt team at his heels. Texas lost, but only because Vanderbilt's eleven ranked with the country's best.

Higgins' football career ended after that game. In 1929 he did not turn out for the eleven, and in 1930 he joined the Athletics. That year and the one following found Higgins on the bench.

In 1932 he played for Portland of the Pacific Coast League and batted .326. He went up to the Athletics again in 1933 and has been in the majors ever since.

EXPLORER, LOST IN JUNGLES, DISCOVERS TAPIOCA AND EATS

Probably everyone knows what tapioca is, and most all will agree that it is a delicious dessert. But tapioca is a fairly recent discovery and the story of its discovery is really amazing.

A number of years ago an explorer in South America became lost and wandered aimlessly in the jungle for many days. He found no food or game and daily grew weaker.

However, the country abounded in cassava root, but the explorer knew that one bite of this root is fatal.

In despair, he decided to eat some of this root and end his torment quickly. Thinking that this would be his last meal, he prepared to make it a feast and, gathering his cooking utensils, he filled them with cassava root and set them on the fire to boil.

Soon an appetizing-looking concoction was ready and, seating himself comfortably, he began to eat. Instead of suffering any ill effects, he soon felt stronger.

Later he made his way out of the jungle and presented tapioca to the world.

It seems that boiling removes the poison from the cassava root and makes a fine food out of an otherwise useless plant.

Turnpike Named By English

The name, "turnpike road," originated in England long ago. In those days the expense of building and repairing many of the roads was paid directly by those who used them.

Gates were placed at intervals in the road, and a man collected money from the people who passed on horseback, in carts or driving cattle or sheep.

A long pointed stick, called a pike, was a common protection and was used on a gate. This could be lowered for the passage of peaceful travelers or used to enforce the payment of the tax.

Later, two crossed pikes were fastened on a post so that they could be whirled around.

The English brought the name to this country and it is now applied to roads.

Occasionally we find a toll collector on some bridge. He holds no stout pike, but we hand him the required coins and drive on, grateful for our fine roads.

Baer's Loss To Farr Ends Hopes

Max Baer's defeat at the hands of England's Tommy Farr removes the clowning Californian from consideration for a title shot this year, and probably for all time.

Expected to have little difficulty in snuffing out contenders for his title for at least a period of five years, playboy Maxie lost his championship the first time he hazarded it.

Maxie blamed this upset on broken hands, and promised to prove the truth of this in his next fight. The "victim" was to be Joe Louis, and, far from co-operating with Maxie, Louis upset everything by pasting Baer out of the picture in four rounds.

Maxie's latest "comeback" was originally slated for New York, with Bob Pastor as the opponent. The New York Boxing Commission at first refused Max a license, but relented the following day. Sulkingly, however, he embarked for England, where he had a better offer of meeting Farr.

BOXING NOTES

James Figg, an English man who lived in the early 18th century, was the first modern champion boxer. He was proficient as a teacher of boxing, and, as a matter of fact, taught more than he fought.

• • •

Broughton, in 1743, was the first man to establish rules for boxing. Two of them were: That no boxer is to hit his adversary when he is down, and the winning man is to have two-thirds of the money.

Dan Donnelly, born in Dublin in 1788, was likened to John L. Sullivan in valor and ring tactics. He died at the age of 22 after drinking a glass of cold water following a strenuous bout with one of his sparring partners.

The longest bare-knuckled fight on record lasted 6 hours 15 minutes. It was between James Kelly and Jonathan Smith, and it took place near Melbourne, Australia, November, 1855.

Marital WOES On Paper

(A book review of "Married People," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. Farrar & Rinehart.)

"Married People" is a collection of stories about unhappily assorted pairs.

The Livingstones, about to separate, are saved from disaster by grandmother, who reconciles them by kidnaping the baby.

Miss Allison, a faded nurse who long ago deserted husband and children, rescues her own unknown daughter, who is on the verge of repeating history.

The Barstows, middle-aged people who marry for the second time, discover they must give up their well-developed and widely different hobbies in order to give in to one another (and that the wife must make the major sacrifices).

The Wellingtons is about a timid man who longed to kill his greedy, nagging fat wife, but when he learns that she has died of heart failure at the movies he is sorry.

The Rosaliers prove that a woe-begone lady is much better off when divorce debunks her adored husband.

Each story swats at a different fly in the ointment of wedded bliss.

As for the writing, we feel that Mrs. Rinehart, like the heroine of the Gordons (concerning a lady author and by far the best story in the book), "sat down at the desk and wrote determinedly."

DOCTOR, Lawyer BEST Salaried

After three years of extensive study that extended into practically all trades in the United States, Dr. Howard F. Clark, professor of education at Columbia, has compiled statistics which grade all professions according to their earning capacity.

His figures show that the long period of study required for medicine and law is more than justified by the great financial rewards obtained when one becomes a practicing physican or lawyer. Both have an earning average of $5250 per year.

Engineering is the next most profitable profession, with an earning average of $5000 yearly, while architecture follows close behind with $4900.

You may not think it, but dentistry is next in line with a mean annual income of $4750.

College professors earn on an average $3260, which is slightly better than library work. Journalism pays greater rewards than the ministry.

The skilled workers are paid higher than the social workers, while nursing is slightly more than teaching public schools.

The unskilled workers and farmers round up the list, with an average income of only $945 and $650, respectively.

Mortgage Terms EXTENDED

Savings banks can now offer several new forms of mortgages to the prospective home-owner under the provisions of the mortgage law recently enacted by the General Court. The most important feature of the new legislation is that which enables savings banks to write long term mortgages with certain amortization provisions, according to A. George Gilman, president of the Malden Savings bank, and first vice president of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts.

Under the new law, two new types of mortgages may be written by savings banks. First, a mortgage for 60 per cent of the value of the property for a term not exceeding twenty years may be written with a provision for the amortization of the mortgage at the rate of not less than 3 per cent a year paid in quarterly installments. Second, a mortgage for 70 per cent of the value of a property also limited to twenty years with a provision for amortization at the rate of 5 per cent a year. The amount that may be loaned on this type of mortgage shall not exceed $25,000 per loan.

Mr. Gilman states:

"The new law recognizes the importance for regular amortization; that is paying off a part of the mortgage each year. The experience of recent years has proved that the old-fashioned 'fixed' mortgage due on demand and requiring only that interest and taxes be paid is unwise except in unusual circumstances, both for the lender and the borrower. Hundreds of home owners would have been far better off in the depression years if during good years they had gradually reduced their mortgages, and hundreds of foreclosures would have been avoided. Well-managed corporations establish sinking funds to amortize their bonds. Home owners should amortize—which literally means 'put to death a little at a time,' their mortgages."

Factory employment and payrolls in the United States reached their highest levels since November, 1929, between February and March, the monthly report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed.

HANEY ON ECONOMICS:

Society Benefits WITH 'RIGHT SPENDING' By All Classes

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, April 24—A reader in Linden, N. J., asks the following questions:

"Is it true that money labor does not get, goes to the few rich?

"Does money spent by the few rich on luxuries, benefit society just as much as if it were spent by the many laborers on necessities?"

In answer, I will say, first, that there are many people who are neither laborers nor very rich. Such people include most farmers, store keepers, professional men and women, and politicians. Therefore, it is not necessarily true that all money which laborers do not get goes to the few rich. For example, the politicians might get it.

In answer to the second question, it is necessary to note that you are mixing up two ideas, namely (1) the idea of spending by "a few," and (2) the idea of spending for "luxuries."

Let us consider these two ideas separately. It is fairly clear that if the bulk of the spending were done by a few, while many people could spend but little, the well-being and happiness of the society would not be as great as they might be.

Such a condition would mean great inequality in incomes. This, in turn, would mean that many people had many unsatisfied wants, while few people had most of their wants satisfied. In such a case, it seems pretty clear that if incomes were more equally distributed, the people who had the most intense wants would be able to gratify those wants. This would increase the total sum of the want gratifications or pleasures in the society.

(This is what we mean in economics by saying that poor people may have higher "marginal utilities," and that to enable them to increase their consumption is likely to gratify more intense wants than would be the case if the rich were to consume more.)

There is one very important limitation upon this conclusion, however, and this is that people must earn their incomes by production. If you take income away from a very productive man who earns a large amount, and give it to a very unproductive man who earns little, you will reduce the total income. There will then be a smaller total income to divide up and spread.

The other idea lies in the question of luxury.

The nearest I can come to a practical definition of "luxury" is to say that it is any act of consumption that does not contribute to the efficiency of the consumer or help to maintain or increase his happiness in the long run. Thus all luxury is, in a sense, wasteful.

NEEDS

Of Boston Port CITED

Hon. John F. Fitzgerald of the Boston Port Authority says:

"It is time that Massachusetts should become seen minded again. With the tremendous competition that our industries are getting in every section of the country why not get busier on our waterfront on the Atlantic ocean that furnishes free water transport to the seven seas of the world.

"Chicago has spent millions, and is willing to spend more than one hundred million dollars to get an open channel that will put her in effective water communication with the big ports of the world. Every big port in the United States has spent millions in building new docks the past ten years but Boston. Twenty years ago the legislature wiped out the Port Authority of Boston after former Governor Fess and myself had created it during his term; since that time not a dock has been built by any public authority. The last report I saw of the expenditure on Boston harbor by the Public Works show these figures; total expenditure $28,490,386; on Boston harbor $325,627 a little more than one percent.

"If Massachusetts could lead this country, if not the world, in shipping and shipbuilding generations ago because the men of that day realized our position on the sea and took advantage of it, why not now? Do we lack manhood? Where is the spirit that induced mere boys to master enough seamanship to sail around the world selling New England's products and buying the products of lands in the furthermost corners of the earth. The present time is most propitious; never were our relations with our neighbors better. Every one of the South American countries, Cuba, Canada not counting many European countries, have entered into close reciprocal treaties with the United states and practically all these products are carried in ships which must find harbors like Boston. What right except stupidity on the part of other ports, has New York to do more business than all the ports put together on the Atlantic ocean?

"There should be a new deal here, and it should start right now. The manhood, the climate, the history, the ocean and Mother Nature are here in the utmost abundance.

COSTS VS. PROFITS

Analysts WATCHING Trends

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Business, trade and stock market analysts all have something in common in considering current mounting costs that threaten to seriously cut profit margins.

Buyer resistance is no longer a vague term but an actuality in certain lines. In others, where price increases to absorb higher costs were expected, there is a tendency to let such matters alone.

Business analysts are concerned with cost developments where buyer resistance is showing because they see a loss in present volumes and probable reduction in profits through efforts to save volume by lowering prices. Trade analysts are worried by the cost-profit trend for the reason it jeopardizes the current phase of the recovery movement and any necessary readjustments mean that the next general trade upswing might be postponed until next fall. Stock market analysts are in a jittery frame of mind for the very good reason the worries of their brother observers, if true and translated to the markets, mean the dashing of hopes that the April lows represented the turning point marking a new intermediate uptrend.

These developments might ordinarily be looked on in the light of normal nervousness after a prolonged period of advance. But it so happens that they are accompanied by a definite puncturing of inflation psychology at a time when forward buying has resulted in the upbuilding of large inventories. The boomlet that this forward buying created may not be as easily corrected as many had supposed and with large supplies of materials, in fabricater's hands a definite lull in producing activity is possible.

* * *

Summed up the situation simply amounts to: Sentiment has been injured by psychological changes and the uncovering of trends endangering profits. It remains to be seen if good first quarter earnings statements coming in hand will prove sufficiently strong to offset them.

From a technical standpoint the stock market is somewhat easier to analyze. Prices are close to the lows set in early April and, if protective reliable signals hold true once again, a breaking of them will herald a resumption of the downtrend. Accordingly traders and investors who make it a point to take advantage of intermediate upward swings will lighten their accounts if both the rails and industrials decline to new lows. Others, who feel the whole situation is uncertain, will not wait for these things to happen, but will lighten up anyway.

* * *

Regardless of the stand taken by individuals they should make it a point when they do act to eliminate debits from their accounts. Some small losses may be taken on recent purchases but it is better to accept them than it is to run the risk of having accounts become frozen.

* * *

Notebook: Strangely the happening which disclosed the poor technical condition of the market was the action taken ag'nst Aluminum Company . . . Following an unsatisfactory rally in prices Friday the news shocked the financial district enough to bring in selling . . . It was not in too large volume at first but it did uncover a paucity of bids which resulted in some uncomfortable breaks in prices . . . And this in itself was sufficient to bring the trading fraternity to the selling side with a vengeance . . .

STOCK Prices Work LOWER

EARLY LOSSES REDUCED

New York, April 24—Stock market prices crumbled in an early selling rush today, but met mild support before the close.

At the worst numerous leaders were off 1 to more than 3 points, some at new lows for the year or longer. Extreme declines were paced in many instances in the final hour.

No help was accorded the stock division by bonds or commodities, most of which were uneven.

Among principal losers were Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Crucible Steel, Republic, National Steel, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Marshall Field, Macy, American Tobacco "B," Oliver Farm, Boeing, Home Sound, National Lead, American Smelting, Homestake Mining, Cerro De Pasco, Texas Corp., Continental Oil, Westinghouse, General Electric, Penn. Dixie-Phillips Petroleum, Schenley, Standard Oil of Indiana, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Pacific, Loew's, Foster-Wheeler, Container Corp., Industrial Rayon, National Cash Register, National Supply and Johns-Manville.

Touching bottom for 1937 were American Telephone, Western Union, American Can, Continental Can, Paramount, National Biscuit, Borden and A. M. Byers.

In a resistant area were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester, Goodrich, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Railway, Illinois Central, Northern Pacific, Consolidated Edison, North American, Eaton Mfg. and Public Service of N. J.

Current Topics

While further talk was heard in the board rooms of a possible letdown in business in the near future, it was hoped mounting cash incomes of industrial workers and farmers would materially cushion the recession.

Those leaning to the cheerful view brought out figures of the department of labor indicating factory employment and payrolls in March were the highest since November, 1929. It was believed the department's indices would point even higher in April.

Interesting to holders of motors were forecasts production of cars and trucks in May and June will reach at least 625,000 for each of these months. In the final half of the year, if demand holds up, it was believed highly probable output may reach 2,000,000 mark.

The French franc was unchanged and sterling slightly lower at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, a former at 24.93 and the latter at 4.43⅝ cents.

Reaffirms Price

Weirton Steel Co., subsidiary of the National Steel Corp., has reaffirmed its steel prices for third quarter delivery.

Dividend

Tidewater Associated Oil Company declared a dividend of 20 cents on the common, payable June 1 to stock of record May 10.

Comments of Brokers

Weighing the different factors, it seems logical to expect an early resumption of selective buying in view of the good earnings prospects of so many companies so far as one can see ahead at this time.—J. S. Wilson-Josephthal & Co.

It is going to be important to detect whether or not the previous low will hold and completed a broad base in the form of a double bottom such as normally occurs prior to a sustained resumption of the uptrend. We prefer to await the outcome before concluding that anything more serious than a development along the latter lines is taking place.—J. E. Molley-Hornblower & Weeks.

Whatever may be the immediate action of securities, we believe that if first-quarter corporation statements continue to follow the excellent trend of several which have already appeared, they will furnish a powerful stimulus to the resumption of a rising scale of prices.—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

Under the circumstances, the market is at a very critical point and must show its mettle soon if a resumption of the intermediate downtrend is to be avoided.—H. D. Comer—Paine.

Earnings reports should continue to influence spasmodic movements in individual issues, but there is no reason for abandoning a selective trading policy.—J. F. Maher—Shields & Co.

Pending more definite indications, we are inclined at this time to counsel against indiscriminate liquidation of equities. It should be remembered the business trend is still upward.—J. S. Bache & Co.

The President's Appeal for Less Spending

THE PRESIDENT has asked Congress to appropriate 1,500 million dollars for work relief in the next fiscal year.

It is extremely significant that in doing this he scarcely mentioned RELIEF, but dwelt at length upon the acute financial emergency which confronts the nation.

He gave the Congress an assortment of STARK REALITIES about government finances.

More ominous than all else is the fact that the Federal budget WILL NOT BE BALANCED, as this paragraph of the message reveals:

The revised estimates of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year 1938 as here presented indicate an estimated net deficit of 418 million dollars."

What does the President think of this?

He said: "I regard it as extremely important that we should achieve a balance of actual income and outgo for the fiscal year 1938, and I appeal to you to join me in a determined effort to bring about that result."

He said again:

"I propose to use every means at my command to eliminate this deficit during the coming fiscal year."

And he bluntly said to Congress:

"An increase in appropriations would nullify our efforts to prevent a deficit in 1938."

CLEARLY in the President's mind is the danger that Congress will yield again, as it has in the past, to the pressure of special groups for new spending with utter unconcern for cost.

He warned: "It is a matter of concern to you and to me who are working for a balanced budget that so many special groups exert the strongest pressure to bring about increases in government expeditures.

"If we are to avoid a continuation of deficits, we must resist these importunities or provide the necessary revenues to meet the increasing costs."

That is his key for Congress:

KEEP EXPENDITURES WITHIN THE LIMIT OF REVENUES.

Cutting government costs is the RIGHT way to do this.

Boosting taxes is the WRONG WAY.

THE budget cannot be balanced by impoverishing the people, which is what present taxes ARE DOING, and which higher taxes will certainly do.

The budget must be balanced BY ECONOMY.

That is what the President insists HE wants.

It is what the nation WANTS AND NEEDS ABOVE ALL ELSE, if it is to emerge from the despair of a government plunging headlong toward bankruptcy, as our government has been doing year after year.

What Is Television, Compared to the Greatest of All Communication That One Good Book Affords?

THE WRITER of this editorial you do not know, may never know. Whether he is tall or short, stout or slender, handsome or homely you cannot guess, and, probably, do not care. That is not important.

You sit in the quiet of your home, or in the noise of the subway train, or possibly in your automobile parked by the side of the road.

The writer sits at his desk in the newspaper editorial room, all about him typewriters clacking, endless conversation and teletype machines pounding out the news of the world.

Yet your mind and his mind are able to bridge the gap of time and space and meet, his thoughts becoming your thoughts just as though you and he, like old friends reunited, were sitting together and talking. That IS important.

Thus is demonstrated to you the marvelous power of the printed word—the book, the newspaper, whatever you may wish to read.

* * *

We are told that the big problem of our day is communication, such as we hope television may supply.

But what is television compared to the greatest of all communication that one good book affords?

Reading brings the whole world to your living room chair—the beautiful Taj Mahal that an Indian prince built for his princess, the pyramids of Egypt raised on the desert no man knows exactly when, Paris' famous Arc de Triomphe, Big Ben of London or our own national capitol.

Reading brings down to you the farthest star that the telescope reveals, though it be ten million light years from our tiny universe.

Reading brings up to you the center of the earth, showing you all the great discoveries physicists, geologists and chemists have made in their laboratories.

Reading can do even more; it can reach out beyond the graves of men and women centuries dead and bring you their thoughts and knowledge, just as this editorial brings you this writer's.

* * *

Actually, scientists say, there is neither time nor space. Good books prove it.

Through books you meet Shakespeare, read the wondrous words that flowed from his pen. You could do no more were he living today and seated with you in your home.

Through books you meet all the important men that ever lived—Homer, Archimedes, Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Dante, Michelangelo, Beethoven, Bacon and others whose names would fill this page.

Through books you learn to play the sweetest music ever written, to build the mightiest bridge ever conceived, to understand the biggest ship that ever plied the sea.

For from books pours out to you all that the mind of man has developed in the 12,000 years since the late Stone Age, and in the dark period of a thousand centuries before that.

* * *

Study Mr. John Moynahan's admirable cartoon, and let the book that he shows lighting the world light also your mind. Let it inspire you to greater effort.

Resolve that you will travel through all history, through infinite time and space, by way of the best of all communication, the well-written book.

Remember that thought is power and, as forest trees grow from trees dead long ago, so your thoughts and yourself will grow from the thoughts of other men and women left in the printed word.

And as you grow you will begin to know how really fortunate and rich you are.

Undoubtedly yours is the greatest of inheritances, the vastest of legacies.

You have no parent, uncle or indulgent kin to leave you a million dollars. That, probably, is true.

But you have more, far more. The greatest men and women of all time have bequeathed you wealth more desirable than money. They left you their brains.

In good books, you will find them.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 24—They finally got me out to another afternoon tea and for a dandy take-off I've just introduced a lady to the husband she divorced eight years ago. All I can do now is look around for some unoccupied corner in which to do a little serious brooding.

I'm something of a wall leaner and far away looker. Sometimes they think I'm not of this world. The ascetic type. Introspective. If anyone tries to speak to me I'll put on my sad wisp of a smile. As though nothing mattered and I was sick of public admiration.

But from the way they glance at me and flounce on you'd think I had a touch of the bubonic plague or something. If I were a hand-kisser and full of small talk I'd get somewhere. Maybe they think I'm part of the furnishings. A statue in chalk or the like.

A fellow ought to rate more than a cup of tea for rounding in to one of these affairs. Don't look now, but that girl slightly lit is weaving my way. Yes, she sees me. Count on me to attract the party drunk. She hiccups: "Ah, my noble dream prince!"

That makes a fellow feel like a dash of lavender right off. No tea for this patootie. You could chin yourself on her breath. She wants to know if I'm "itty." And she's beginning to pick things off my coat lapel and get confidential. The coy sort. They cry easily, too. It won't be long now until she's in tears over the passing of her grandaunts in the war of the rebellion, or that I've hurt her feelings. I can lean against a wall, keep my mouth absolutely shut and hurt more feelings than any professional insulter that ever lived. It's a gift. I never miss.

I knew K. She's tuning up. I hope her mascara doesn't run. She says if I don't want to talk to her why not go on about my business. What do I think she is—a pick-up? And sniffs that's the trouble with a girl coming to a party unescorted. Some young fellow is always trying to get fresh with her. All of a sudden she decides to become haughty.

I wish they'd just let me go on with my leaning until it is time to go. It takes a lean guy for a long lean. Perhaps I'd have a better time if I went giddy and took up a little flirting. At my age flirtation is a feat in gallantry. The last time I tried it, I smiled at a neat Myrna Loy-looking number in the foyer of the hushed she divorced eight years ago. All I can do now is look around for some unoccupied corner in which to do a little serious brooding.

That makes a fellow feel like a dash of lavender right off. No tea for this patootie. You could chin yourself on her breath. She wants to know if I'm "itty." And she's beginning to pick things off my coat lapel and get confidential. The coy sort. They cry easily, too. It won't be long now until she's in tears over the passing of her grandaunts in the war of the rebellion, or that I've hurt her feelings. I can lean against a wall, keep my mouth absolutely shut and hurt more feelings than any professional insulter that ever lived. It's a gift. I never miss.

I knew K. She's tuning up. I hope her mascara doesn't run. She says if I don't want to talk to her why not go on about my business. What do I think she is—a pick-up? And sniffs that's the trouble with a girl coming to a party unescorted. Some young fellow is always trying to get fresh with her. All of a sudden she decides to become haughty.

I wish they'd just let me go on with my leaning until it is time to go. It takes a lean guy for a long lean. Perhaps I'd have a better time if I went giddy and took up a little flirting.

me. She's going. Miffed. Nods curtly. Now that the crowd is thinning out I might inch over to the refectory table to filch a few knickknacks. It looks as though it had been hit by a hurricane. All that is left of a big juicy ham is the bone and there aren't enough baked beans left for a decent snack. Gnawing at the crusts is my dish anyway. Any little scraps left over are good enough for me. Too good as a matter of fact.

Here comes that old pelican with a longnette everybody has been avoiding. She will now try to annex America's Wall Flower No. 1, of course. But I've had enough even though I have to sneak out of here and leave that new $10 hat. And I hope I don't come across that high hand-shaking hostess either. I'm in no mood to run up a step ladder and tell her good-bye. I busted my suspenders where they cross, reaching when I came in.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"What did I think," said the famous editor, "was the most significant gesture in 1937—the thing that stood out most distinctly and significantly from the world of my youth, 50 years ago?"

"Hitch hikers," I said, "thumbing for a ride."

He looked at me quizzically—thought I was poking. I wasn't. Those uplifted, demanding thumbs seem to me the most significant, perhaps the most sinister, gesture in our modern world. They mark the greatest change in human attitudes and relationships. They're by all odds, the toughest problem to tackle. And I'll honestly admit—in face of certain unpopularity — that I haven't found the answer in my own mind.

Personally, I never stop for a hitch hiker any more. It's against the law in California, where I spend most of my time, as it is coming to be in many other states. The reasons are obvious. Murders. Damage claims by those who seek to take advantage.

Yet in spite of that, it was years before I could drive on unheeding . . . and I still feel ashamed when I do, it's so grossly against the whole code of generous neighborliness by which I was trained.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Yet, I have to admit the law's wise. But, even so, it doesn't go to the core of the matter. There's more involved in that uplifted thumb, the other fellow's request for a lift. There's his increasing conviction that he has a right to that lift . . . as good a right as you have to sit in that automobile. And there's the deepening resentment when that "right" is denied.

Nine times out of ten I'm cursed. In the wilder portions of the Northwest they're apt to block your way by lying down in the highway—forcing you to stop. And they feel they've a "right" to do this, too.

I wonder. I'm honestly badly troubled by the whole thing and—what it means. I suspect it points to an entire change in our social order. But what kind of a change? And heading where?

I suppose it's easy enough to dismiss the problem, if you've never been very poor yourself and don't know what poverty means. But I have been—and do. Pickings were pretty lean for most Americans 50 years ago. Generally speaking, we didn't expect 'em otherwise. Out on the frontier we all wore patches—knew real hunger and constant hardship. Life was like that. Why talk about it? Whatever the deal, we built up a pride resistance that was a honey.

Nobody—as far as I can remember—TAUGHT us to feel that way about asking favors or taking charity. We were just born that way. Americans—REAL ones—simply bustled for themselves—didn't take help—cherished their own privacy and respected the other fellow's. All this was the unwritten code. No one dreamed of breaking it. But now—

VITAL PROBLEM

Now it's almost as much a matter of course to start "thumbing" as soon as you know you have one! Not only asking favors but expecting them as your right. And, theoretically, I can see the argument behind it. I was bred a Socialist. My vote's 100 per cent for Labor—always will be. And I truly believe the country should largely belong to the workers. BUT—

Are these thumbers who line the highways the "makers" of the world? Do they represent labor? Have they put a stake in the pot, as the fellow has done who is driving that little flivver—who paid for it out of his scanty wages? Or are they the drones who have infested and preyed upon society since its first vague formation?

Whatever their "rights," this much is sure—those uplifted thumbs are AGAINST privacy, AGAINST private property. Their very appearance strikes at the root of every old American tradition—all old American pride. We can no longer laugh them off—nor law them off. There they are, and it's time that you and I answered this question—

Just why and what is the Thumber?

Does he represent Democracy on the march—

OR THE JUNGLE ON THE PROWL?

And what would YOU suggest we should do about him?

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

A national survey shows that the state governors, with two exceptions, are opposed to reduction of the Federal relief program. The majority view is expressed by Governor Benson of Minnesota, who says:

"I don't see how we could possibly take over any more of the load. If we are forced to do it, it may mean bankruptcy for the State."

If carrying the burden of relief will bankrupt the States, what will it do to the Federal Government? After all, the nation is only a union of the States. And the Federal Government has no source of revenue other than the people of the States.

President Roosevelt may want to cut expenditures. But he will have a hard time doing that as long as the majority of the States are singing the "Gimme, Gimme" chorus. And while the Federal Government is putting up the money for relief, States and municipalities are not going to worry about getting people off the relief rolls and onto private jobs.

Ordinary citizens, noting that the Treasury Department plans to borrow $50,000,000 a week for an indefinite period, wonder how the Federal Government can go on spending at the present rate. Recent drops in the prices of government bonds worry them. They wonder who is going to lend all this money to the Treasury, and how much longer the Government's credit is going to be good.

Thus far, the deficit for the current fiscal year is a little more than two billion dollars. The national debt is close to the 35-billion-dollar mark. Any individual who was in that fix would be hopelessly bankrupt. But when the Government wants more funds all it has to do is call on the banks and they must provide it. They are so loaded with government securities they must help protect the Government's credit for their own self-preservation.

Counsel for the perpetrator of a diabolical murder in New York pleaded that the slayer had been "suffering for ten years with a social disease which affected his nervous system so much he did not understand the nature and quality of his act." That is about as near no excuse as could be offered for beating a nine-year-old child to death. In those ten years, he had plenty of time to obtain treatment for the disease which his attorney claims made him insane.

This New York case should add impetus to the campaign which has been started in the United States for the compulsory treatment of social diseases with which one out of every ten adults is said to be afflicted.

The prevalence of these diseases is appalling. Maxine Davis, in the May Pictorial Review, declares "there is more social disease than there is measles, twice as much as tuberculosis and a hundred times as much as infantile paralysis."

If a decent, law abiding citizen is murdered, his relatives cannot collect damages from the county or State for having failed to protect him in his constitutional right to live. But if the man who killed him were lynched by a mob, under the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill relatives of the murderer could collect damages from the county in which the lynching took place.

In some States, the maximum value fixed by law for a human life is $5000. That is the largest amount which can be collected in a damage suit for an accidental death. The minimum is as little as a jury may decide, or nothing. The Gavagan Bill provides that the damages for a lynching shall be not less than $2000 nor more than $10,000. It makes no difference if the individual lynched is a confessed or a convicted murderer. His life would be valued at twice as much as the life of a respectable citizen who had been accidentally killed.

G-Man Dies a Hero

SEVEN members of the gang accused of robbing a bank in Katonah, N. Y., are in various jails.

The thorough methods of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in rounding up suspected criminals have thus produced their usual amazing results.

Public satisfaction over this result must be tempered by knowledge that one of the Federal agents engaged in the roundup paid with his life for his heroic service.

This reminds the American people that the underworld is deadly and relentless, armed to kill and WILLING to kill.

But it is also a reminder that the G-Men are beating the underworld AT ITS OWN GAME.

They are not to be stopped by bullets. Agent Wayne Baker died a hero's death, as have many of his fellow officers before him, but the Federal Bureau of Investigation has completed the job he started AS IT ALWAYS DOES.

It is doing more to give real meaning to the fact that CRIME DOES NOT PAY than any other effort ever made in behalf of the American people and their security.

The deepest sympathies of the nation are stirred by the death of G-Man Baker. The manner of his death is proof anew that EVEN MURDER cannot stop the FBI.

City Cleaning

SPRING housecleaning is an old institution in New England, and an important one.

No less important is Spring city cleaning, a new institution, proclaimed by Mayor Mansfield for the fortnight, May 1 to May 15.

The period should be a challenge to every Bostonian to clean his home, his yard and all his property; to paint building that need painting, and to repair dilapidated structures.

It is a campaign that should stimulate civic pride and lend itself to general co-operation.

But there is even more in the Spring Clean Up, Paint Up and Fire Prevention observance than mere pride; there is the assurance of a happier and safer life for everyone.

Merit Upheld

GOVERNOR HURLEY, vetoing a bill to provide life jobs for various Hull municipal employes, said:

"The measure seems to me an evasion of the Civil Service laws that I am pledged to uphold and which I am determined to uphold."

The people generally will favor the Governor's determination; merit, not political influence, should be the principal qualification for public office.

In the long run, the Hull employes will probably benefit by his veto, for the Legislature that now would employ them for life could in the future repeal the law and terminate their jobs.

The only real protection for any government worker is Civil Service.
